McNary and Borah Refuse To Serve in TVA Inquiry

Reject the Posts When Garner Leaves Bridges Off Committee.

'Strike' by G. O. P. In Senate Talked

Several Members Indicate They Will Not Accept Places.

(Pictures—Page 3.)

By Sidney Olson.

Two Senate Republicans, Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, the minority leader, and William E. Borah, of Idaho, refused yesterday to serve on the joint Congressional committee to investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Their refusal, coming immediately after their appointment by Vice President John N. Garner, led to rumors that the Senate Republicans were on a sit-down strike on the investigation because Garner did not appoint Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, chief G. O. P. critic of the TVA, to the committee.

A number of Republican Senators, in private conversation, indicated they would not serve unless Bridges did. But the attitude of Administration men was summed up in a remark by Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, and father of the TVA, when he said:

"I would object to having Willkie or Insull serve on this committee, but I would rather have them on it than Senator Bridges."

Headed by Donahey.

(Wendell Willkie is the president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, holding company of most utilities in the TVA area, and Samuel Insull is the famous utility czar whose empire crashed during the 1929-1932 depression.)

The obstacle-studded history of the proposed investigation—as rocky as the Tennessee River itself—thus bumped into a new and uncharted reef. Garner was as surprised as anyone at the instant refusals of McNary and Borah to serve. He would not say when he intended to make new appointments. Those he made yesterday he had kept secret from everyone, including the appointees.

The five Senate appointees were headed by Senator Vic Donahey (Democrat), Ohio, who said last night he had not determined whether he would accept the appointment. It was generally believed he would, but that he preferred to confer with the Vice President first.

"A Town Meeting."

The others were Senators Fred Brown (Democrat), of New Hampshire, a foe of the private utilities, and H. H. Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming. Brown was out of the city, but Schwartz, grinning when interviewed, said:

"Shucks, there goes my summer vacation—shot!"

The House appointees, all of whom accepted, were:

Representatives James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York; William J. Driver (Democrat), of Arkansas; R. Ewing Thomason (Democrat), of Texas; Thomas A. Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, and Charles A. Wolverton (Republican), of New Jersey.

Borah declined on the basis that he had "always opposed investigations by town meetings." This was a satirical stab at the ten-man size of the committee, as Borah has long contended that only three-man or five-man committees are efficient.

"I never saw a joint investigation that was successful," said the Idahoan, who had written out his resignation from the committee an

McKellar's Swoop at Copeland Lands Only on Page One

One-Round McKellar, the Memphis Kid, won a default decision over Carnation Copeland, the Bowery Baby-Face, in a bloodless battle on the Senate floor last night.

The almost-fight, in a no-blow by no-blow account, began over a little matter of $42,000,000, which Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, wanted to cut out of the War Department appropriation bill and which Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, wanted left in.

COPELAND.

McKELLAR

The quarrel finally got hot, after both men had bumbled about in their corners for a while, shadow-boxing and punching the air vigorously.

McKellar, advancing, called Copeland a "——————." Copeland dodged this and countered with some advice to the general effect of "go away and cool off."

McKellar then challenged the silver-haired physician to step outside and mix it, but Copeland waved this away with a soft rebuttal. In some confusion, other Senators adjourned the session, whereupon McKellar, repeating his words about blankety-blank-you-know-what, charged at Copeland.

Two other Democrats, Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Bennett Clark, of Missouri, thereupon hauled McKellar away, still shouting his challenge, as Copeland said: "He'll cool off."

Both, in their heat, had forgotten, apparently, that they are fraternity brothers, bound to love each other for dear old Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Man May Deduct Gaming Loss From Tax, but Wife Mustn't

When a man risks his money at games of chance he is investing it, but when a woman tries cards or roulette or to pick the winner in the third at Bowie, she's gambling, the United States Government ruled yesterday.

VINA DELMAR.

EUGENE DELMAR.

So the man may deduct an income tax on his losses because he's simply made a bad investment—but the woman must pay for her vanished dollars because the Government holds she didn't really expect to win, and so should be taxed for her fun.

This decision was announced yesterday by the Board of Tax Appeals in the case of Vina Delmar, novelist and scenarist, and her husband, Eugene. The Delmars had a flutter at Agua Caliente in 1933. Eugene lost $1,200 at cards and Vina $300 at roulette.

Both sought income tax deductions for these sums. The Board of Tax Appeals, after the Internal Revenue Bureau denied the application, ruled yesterday that:

Eugene could deduct his losses because he played with an anticipation of profit.

Vina could not deduct her losses because she played for fun and was not expecting to win when she placed her bets.

The board did not explain how it arrived at its decision.

Rail Subsidy Is Ruled Out By President

Message on Remedy for Roads' Plight Promised Within a Week.

Decision Broad Enough to Bar Direct Aid to Any Industry.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Promising a message to Congress within a week regarding the plight of the railroads, President Roosevelt yesterday rejected proposals for payment of Government subsidies to the carriers. In doing so he condemned Government subsidies for industries in distress generally.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, also expressed opposition to Government subsidizing of railroads. He declared the alternative to Government ownership was a general reorganization of the railroads on a reduced capital structure.

The President made known his views at his first press conference since his return from Warm Springs, Ga., and a day after a group of railroad executives and representatives of the railway labor brotherhoods discussed with him the railroad problem, particularly the feasibility of a Treasury subsidy in lieu of any wage reductions at this time.

Couldn't Stop Subsidies.

Amiable and cheerful during the press conference, Mr. Roosevelt talked at some length regarding the subsidy proposal. In the first place, he said, the final solution of the general transportation problem in this country remains unknown. He did not think any subsidy should be paid until a permanent program is adopted.

Another consideration, he said, was the certainty that once the Government commenced paying subsidies it could not stop. He recalled that when the interurban electric lines commenced going downhill a few years ago the Government did not attempt to save them with subsidies, even though the jobs of many thousands of men were at stake.

Points to Economies.

If a subsidy were given railroads, the President went on, many other industries in distress would come in and ask how about something for them. The cotton mills, he said, were not doing so well; many steel mills were idle and automobile plants were on reduced operations. Each of these would be entitled to a subsidy if such help were given the railroads, he explained. All these were private industries and he hoped they would remain so, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he believed Government ownership and operation of the railroads had been given a fair test during the war period. He replied that railroad

Pretty Nurse Says Alleged Murderer Gave Her 2 Rings

Police seeking a motive for the fatal beating of Mrs. Blanche Gertrude Landis the night of March 29 learned yesterday her husband, James L. Landis, gave two diamond rings to a pretty young nurse shortly before his wife was slain. Landis, rookie fireman, is being held for the grand jury on a charge of murder.

Detective Sergt. William Liverman, of the Homicide Squad, returned yesterday from Atkinson, N. C., with a signed statement by Virginia Simpson, 21, brunette nurse at the Episcopal Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital. Miss Simpson said she had been going "on double dates" with Landis for some time, but that she did not know until she read of his wife's beating that he was married.

The statement declared she got permission to leave on her vacation early when she read of the beating. She said she gave the rings to a male friend of Landis before leaving and asked that they be returned to him.

Drastic Curb Ordered for Car Parking

Ban to Clear 100 Ft. on Approach Side at Traffic Lights.

7,000 Wrecks Last Year at Blind Crossings Are Cited.

Washington's new parking restrictions, announced yesterday by the Commissioners, were designed to safeguard moving traffic and protect pedestrians, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said last night.

Effective after 10 days, the rules will prohibit parking within 100 feet on the approach side of intersections controlled by signal lights and 20 feet back of building lines.

Van Duzer said he did not consider the proposed law as "drastic."

Accidents Drastic.

"Rather," he said, "it was drastic last year when 7,000 accidents occurred at blind intersections—corners where motorists parked too close to the curb line and obstructed the view for approaching vehicles."

He added:

"In order to handle traffic expeditiously at intersections controlled by traffic lights, it is necessary to have as many lanes as possible in which cars may stop when the light is against them, so that when the light changes the largest possible volume will move through the intersection. When cars are permitted to park between white lines and the curb on the approach side of the intersections, the reserve capacity is reduced by one lane."

Many taxicab stands will be affected by the parking ban.

In the other amendment recommended by Van Duzer, which prohibits parking between the curb lines and 20 feet back of the building line, at intersections, a clause was added stating that in no case shall the ban extend more than 50 feet back of the point of intersection of the curb lines.

Too Much Speed.

This clause was added because in some cases the building line is set far back of the line of intersection of the curb lines, it was explained.

Of the 12,700 accidents last year approximately 60 per cent occurred at intersections, Van Duzer stated. The direct cause of these accidents was too much speed for conditions, he said.

"The indirect cause was poor visibility on account of parked cars," Van Duzer explained. "Cars parked so near the corners as to obstruct the vision until the cars had almost entered the intersection. There is no doubt that if parking were prohibited nearer than 20 feet back of the building line, intersection collisions would be reduced materially."

Under the present law requiring cars to park 25 feet back from

Roosevelt to See 12,000 March In Army Day Parade Today

BRIG. GEN. BRYDEN.

While the military forces keep open house at posts throughout the United States, the national celebration of Army Day on the twenty-first anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the World War will be climaxed here this afternoon by a colorful parade of 12,000 persons.

Brig. Gen. William F. Bryden, commander of the Sixteenth Infantry Brigade, Fort Meade, Md., will lead the procession down Constitution avenue from the east front of the Capitol to be reviewed by President Roosevelt.

Leaving the Capitol at 1:45 p. m., the head of the parade is to reach the reviewing stand near the White House a half hour later. At the President's side will be Rear Admiral Reginald R. Belknap, national commander of the Military Order of the World War, which is sponsoring the celebration.

This evening the annual Army Day banquet will be held at the Mayflower Hotel with Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson to speak on "Whither America?"

In recognition of the occasion Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson yesterday extended filicitations of the Navy to Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring. In his letter he said:

"We take pride in the efficiency and achievements of the Army and the privilege of sharing with you our common purposes and responsibilities in the National Defense."

He was joined in his expression of good will by Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations,

Tax Bill Given Senate, Swift Action Sought

Harrison Predicts Measure Will Stimulate Business Activity.

A 371-page tax bill, designed "to bring about greater business activity and a freer flow of capital into productive enterprises," yesterday was reported to the Senate by Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee.

Drastically revising corporation income and capital gains tax provisions of the House tax bill, the revenue measure will be started on its course through the Senate today, with emphasis laid on speedy enactment.

Seek to Spur Business.

Harrison was optimistic as to the reception awaiting it. He predicted Senate concurrence in committee repeal of the undivided profits tax, acceptance of his flat 15 per cent capital gains tax proposals, and "generally harmonious action."

But he would make no predictions on the outcome of farm bloc efforts to attach $212,000,000 in processing taxes, and Western bids for excises on imported pork and canned beef. Nor would he attempt to forecast Senate action on proposals by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, for broadening the income tax base. Harrison backed the La Follette plan in committee, where it failed by a narrow margin.

Harrison's 52-page report said his bill sought to go "even further than the House bill in an effort to stimulate and encourage business." Under present estimates of 1938 business conditions, he said his measure will produce $20,000,000 more than the House bill and "this estimate leaves out of account any added revenue which your committee is certain will result from increased business activity."

Sees More Taxable Income.

"If this can be done," said the report, "the number of unemployed will rapidly decrease. Moreover, such a result is vital to the revenue. High rates of income tax are ineffective in producing revenue when there is very little income to tax.

"If business goes ahead, and there is no reason why it should not go ahead under the provisions of the bill as reported, then there will result more taxable income, with a consequent increase in the revenue.

Reorganization Bill's Foes Seek Showdown Vote Today

By Robert C. Albright.

Resisting all efforts to limit debate, opponents of the Government reorganization bill rallied support last night for a show down effort in the House today to kill the Administration measure.

Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, told members he will move to strike out the enacting clause.

"That will bring a clear-cut vote on whether to proceed further on this bill on so-called 'concessions,'" the New Yorker said.

Administration leaders, who failed yesterday in four efforts to curtail debate by unanimous consent agreement, said they were not worried by the O'Connor move.

"We can lick it by more than 50 votes," said Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Before the Rules chairman can make his motion, all debate must be ended and a start made on reading the bill. Having failed to limit debate by agreement, leaders were prepared today to move to restrict it, and may carry their motion to a roll call vote of the House.

Deputies Scorn Blum Program In Near Riot

Defeat Foreseen for Decree Powers, New Government Likely.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 5.—Premier Blum's demand for decree powers stirred a near-riot in the Chamber of Deputies today and forced temporary suspension of the session, while a caucus vote of the Senate's controlling party showed his bill would be defeated overwhelmingly in the upper house.

The Socialist premier's apparently hopeless fight aroused parliamentary speculation whether his regime might be succeeded by a government with dictatorial economic and financial powers.

While deputies in the chamber screamed "robber" at the premier in debate on his proposals, senators of the democratic left, which has absolute control of the Senate, voted, 46 to 3, in caucus to reject Blum's demand for decree powers.

Thousands of new strikers joined the 30,000 already out. The huge metal workers' strike spread to several new plants in Paris.

At the Chausson Metal Works, in Asnieres, 1,800 employes struck and occupied the plant in protest against reduction of force. Red flags were hung from factory windows. The

Austrian Prelate Goes to See Pope On Nazi Rebuke

By the United Press.

Vatican City, April 5.—Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, Archbishop of Vienna, who stirred Vatican resentment by his appeal to Austria's 6,000,000 Catholics to indorse German annexation, arrived here tonight and went into conference with Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican secretary of state.

He was to be received in private audience tomorrow by Pope Pius II, to whom he is expected to explain his pro-Nazi stand at a time when the Vatican's official organ, L'Osservatore Romano, was bitterly assailing and warning against any attempts at Nazi domination of Austrian Catholics.

The Vienna prelate was accompanied to Pacelli's office by his assistant, Mgr. Weinbacher, who arrived secretly two days ago and delivered a letter from Innitzer explaining the view of Austria's Catholic bishops.

Tortosa Besieged.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, April 5.—A few suicide squads of government militiamen were reported holding Tortosa tonight, fighting to the last to prevent Spanish insurgent armies from reaching the Mediterranean.

Heavy guns, however, had the city and the coastal road to Valencia under fire. Thus Catalonia, Spain's northeastern corner, was cut off from the rest of government territory.

[President Manuel Azana of the loyalist government and his wife were reported to have fled northward from Barcelona, before Franco's threat to annihilate the city, the United Press said.

Barcelona Next Goal.

[Reports that Franco is contemplating an ultimatum to the loyalist government demanding unconditional surrender were attributed to the insurgents' northern base at Burgos and came to the frontier by way of Lisbon, where pro-Franco sentiment is strong.—Editor's note.]

Once the last resistance at Tortosa is wiped out, Gen. Franco's troops are expected to converge on Barcelona, Catalonia's main seaport and capital of government Spain, from three directions:

Advance East of Lerida.

Franco as said to have given strict orders to all commanders that Barcelona was not to be subjected to severe bombardment under any circumstances. He was described as confident that the "fifth column" of insurgent sympathizers within the city would be able to capture it virtually without firing a shot by the time insurgent armies get within 20 miles.

Insurgents were reported to have occupied the electric power plants at Tremp, northwest of Lerida, which supply half of Catalonia. Electric power was shut off temporarily in central sections of Barcelona today, stalling street cars and extinguishing lights.

Presidents Set '60 for Filipino Trade Freedom

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt and President Quezon of the Philippines have agreed to postpone Philippine economic independence until the end of 1960.

The State Department made public yesterday a program providing for gradual elimination of present trade preferences between the islands and the United States.

The program results from a year's investigation by a joint preparatory committee on Philippine affairs, headed by John V. MacMurray, United States Ambassador to Turkey.

Keeps Ties 15 Years.

It does not change the date of Philippine political independence, July 4, 1946, but provides that economic ties shall not be severed until nearly 15 years after that date.

It will probably be presented to Congress, but it is not expected to be ready for the present session. Congressional approval is required.

State Department officials contended that if the Philippines were made to stand wholly on their own feet in 1946, the shock to the insular economy might be too great. They said a period of adjustment was necessary.

Five Per Cent a Year.

In general, the program calls for an annual reduction of 5 per cent in the trade preferences given Philippine products.

That is, five per cent of the American duties which would apply to the products if they came from some European country, for instance, would be applied each year, beginning in 1941.

In 1946, the date for political independence, this percentage would aggregate 25. Up to that point it would consist of export taxes imposed and retained by the Philippines government.

In 1946, having reached 25 per cent, the levy would be imposed when the products arrived here. Thereafter, another 5 per cent would be tacked on.

McNutt Against Independence.

In the ordinary course, this would lead to complete elimination of the trade preferences in 1961. However, there would be an adjustment of fiscal dates in the meantime, so that the elimination actually would occur in 1960.

Paul V. McNutt, United States high commissioner for the Philippines, has recommended to the President, it is learned, the abolition of the idea of Philippine independence, political, or economic.

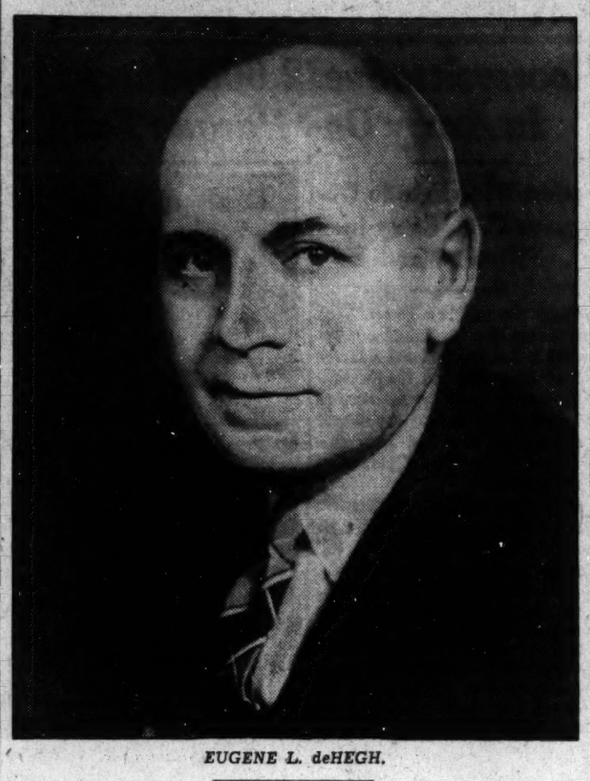
DeHegh Wants Crosstown Bus To Serve Cleveland Park Area



EUGENE L. deHEGH.

Civic Worker Favors Sales Tax But Might Even Accept Privilege Levy to Escape Annual Changes in Bookkeeping.

By Christine Sadler

The businessman no longer is able to sit down and plan his business. He has to sit down and attend to all the details imposed on him by regulations and restrictions and requirements, says Eugene L. deHegh, president of the Cleveland Park Business Men's Association.

By the time he gets accustomed to one set of books and rules he finds the law has been changed and he has to scrap everything and start all over, DeHegh finds.

For that reason, as much as for any other, DeHegh will be glad when the question of whether the District is to have a business privilege tax is settled.

Sales Tax Favored.

"Whatever it is going to be, let us have it—and with it some assurance it is going to hold. This thing of having to set up new books every time Congress meets is no fun," he declares.

The Cleveland Park Association is not in favor of the business privilege tax, even in a modified form. It believes a sales tax is the most equitable, easiest collected and most painless type of taxation that can be levied in the District under present conditions and that the business privilege tax is the most inequitable and most unsatisfactory tax that could be thought up.

The Cleveland Park group, with 75 members, looks after business interests "from Calvert street north on Connecticut avenue." It was organized five years ago and has been interested in developing the area in the uptown theater district into an active shopping center.

Want Crosstown Bus.

The better type of shops which continue to move into the area and the amount of business developing there have encouraged members and make them hopeful for the future. Their theater and 5 and 10 cent stores have been two of their greatest aids in attracting shoppers to the area, they find.

The association is backing a movement to secure a crosstown bus to serve that part of the city. One employe in DeHegh's Laundry—known as Gene's Laundry Shop—has to travel 2 miles down town and back to get to her home, which is only eight blocks from the office.

A contest in which high school students of the area would be offered prizes for creating an emblem best suited to the association is being considered by deHegh and members of the organization.

Served With Navy.

deHegh was born in Delaware, of Belgian and French parentage. He moved to the District eight years ago from Roanoke. He has been running his own business at 3524 Connecticut avenue for three years.

In the World War deHegh served in the United States Navy, part of the time in Naval Intelligence and the rest in the transport service. He was on one of the first ships into Trieste after the armistice, when D'Annunzio was making that part of the world safe for Italy and Mussolini. If Hitler thinks he is going to get any of the Trieste-Fiume portion of the old Austrian empire for Germany, he is mistaken, deHegh thinks.

Flew His Own Plane.

D'Annunzio entertained the Americans lavishly, deHegh recalls, for he was the type of person who "did things with a whoop and a hoorah." deHegh took advantage of his stay there to do some knife and dagger trading with Austrian and Italian soldiers. The collection he acquired fills a large chest and is a lesson in the art of cutting and slashing as it has been practiced by armies for thousands of years.

Although deHegh asserts he has not been inside a school since he was 11 years of age, he is well educated. He says that everything he knows was learned by the "trial and error" method.

Back in "barnstorming" days his chief sport was flying his own plane. Today deHegh sticks to motoring, which he claims is much more dangerous. "In flying," he says, "you make your own mistakes and stand or fall by them. In motoring you are at the mercy of the other fellow."

The deHeghs live at the Annapolis Hotel. They moved in to stay one night eight years ago and have never moved out. They have one daughter and a young grand-daughter.

Friday—R. W. Parry, president of of Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Leahy Insists On Navy Able to Crush Any Foe

Admiral Says Fleet Must Be Strong Enough to Guard Trade Routes.

By the United Press.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, warned the Senate Naval Affairs Committee yesterday that the United States must maintain a fleet powerful enough to crush any possible enemy "whereever it may be found" and to protect this country's essential trade routes throughout the world.

Leahy's statement, released last night by Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, outlined the naval policy as "designed to support the known national policies, such as the Monroe Doctrine, the protection of nationals abroad, the protection of American shipping and the protection of American territory, including island possessions, against invasion."

Redefinition of the Navy policy, substantially the same as was stricken from President Roosevelt's $1,121,000,000 expansion bill by the House, threatened to bring renewal of opposition demands for further clarification of the Administration's foreign policy immediately after the super-Navy bill reaches the Senate floor.

Up for Debate.

Admiral Leahy's statement that the Navy must be able to operate offensively at great distances from the American shore line to prevent a blockade will provide cause for more vigorous debate on foreign policy and reports that the United States has "excellent arrangements" with Great Britain regarding naval co-operation.

Leahy told the committee that "unless the Navy is sufficiently strong to proceed against the enemy, wherever it may be found, the enemy could remain at a distance and could maintain a blockade against us for so long a time as it desired to do so, and we would just have to remain quiescent."

Not Strictly Defensive.

He said a strictly defensive Navy would be incapable of bringing war to a quick, successful conclusion. He declared: "By assuming the defensive we would yield all initiative to the enemy."

He said Great Britain's fear of a possible combination of other European powers, presumably Germany and Italy, was important in starting the world naval race, but assured the committee that combinations affecting Britain do not necessarily concern the United States.

The Gallup Poll

Hitler War Moves Have Marked Effect on U. S. Opinion on "Our Next War."

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 5.—On the twenty-first anniversary of America's declaration of war against Germany, a surprisingly large number of American voters—nearly half—think the United States will have to fight Germany again in their lifetime.

George Gallup

This fact is revealed in one of the most interesting surveys ever conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The vote is a striking example of the effect which warlike events, such as Hitler's recent seizure of Austria, can have on public opinion in a peace-loving Nation. And it indicates a fatalistic belief on the part of many voters that America cannot remain neutral when war comes.

The Institute put the following question to a Nation-wide cross-section of voters drawn from all walks of life:

"Do you think the United States will have to fight Germany again in your lifetime?"

The vote was:

Yes	46%
No	54%

The fact that nearly half the country is resigned to the posibility of another fight helps explain the widespread public sentiment for the big Navy bill. The Institute found in a recent survey that more than seven out of every ten voters favor an increase in fighting ships.

The survey also goes a long way toward confirming the recent statement made by American Ambassador Kennedy that European aggressors cannot count on America staying out of the next war. American dislike for entangling alliances does not mean, he said, "that our country would not fight under any circumstances short of actual invasion."

The fact that so many voters in the survey think we will have to fight Germany again does not mean that they want to fight her. It is not an expression of jingoistic war fever. Institute studies in the past have repeatedly found public sentiment overwhelmingly in favor of peace and of isolation both from Europe and the Orient. In fact, voters indicated in a recent Institute survey that they believe war is futile and for that reason deplore our entrance into the last war.

What the present survey does show is the extent to which a fatalistic attitude toward war has developed. The number of voters who think we will be drawn into a European conflict is growing. A little over a year ago, in January, 1937, the Institute found that as many as 62 per cent of voters felt the United States could remain neutral in the event of war. Seven months later, in August, the percentage had dropped to 56. Today, judging by the survey on the question of fighting Germany again, the figure has declined still further to 54 per cent.

Burlew Confirmed As Ickes Aide to End 3-Month Row

By the Associated Press.

Ebert K. Burlew won Senate confirmation yesterday as First Assistant Secretary of the Interior Department. His appointment had been opposed for three months by Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, who forced hearings by the Senate Public Lands Committee on alleged irregularities in the department.

Burlew entered Government service as a War Department clerk in 1910; has worked in several Federal agencies, and Secretary Ickes describes him as "the most efficient man in my department."

Visiting Nurses Told to Sit and Talk to Patients

Greater appreciation of mental and social aspects of their cases was recommended to members of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society yesterday by Dr. Esther L. Richards, associate professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins University.

"Time was when the doctor had time to look at our tongues, feel our pulse, but most of all to sit down and chat," Dr. Richards said at the society's annual meeting at the Y. W. C. A. "Today there is more science but less art," she added.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president of the society's board, was chairman of the meeting.

U. S. Agency Says Film Was Misrepresented

By the United Press.

The Federal Trade Commission Monday reprimanded a motion picture company for representing that its film of youthful love and woes was a faithful dramatization of Dr. Charles E. Sheldon's best-selling religious novel, "In His Steps."

Hazen Orders Warring Bribe Charge Inquiry

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Determined to "verify or explode" reports that the indicted Warring gang chieftains paid large sums of money to "protect" their vast gambling interests, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said last night he had ordered an immediate investigation of recent grand jury charges.

"I feel certain these charges are without foundation," he said, "but I intend to make every effort to uncover any evidences of graft. I have ordered a complete inquiry."

Payments Concealed.

In returning income tax fraud indictment against the Warrings—Emmett, Leo and Charles—the grand jury described payments of large sums of money to "persons unknown to this grand jury." The amounts, it was charged, were concealed in books and records of the racket mob.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, revealed he had conferred with Federal agents to determine on what evidence the grand jury based its accusation. He said the only evidence of "protection" payments so far is a statement from the Warrings, who have declined to name the recipients. He added that a similar report was investigated several months ago.

It was announced yesterday that the Warring trial will begin about the first of June. United States Attorney David A. Pine will act as chief prosecutor, aided by John Wilson.

Inquiry Took a Year.

Wilson and agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau were responsible for Monday's indictment. For nearly a year they investigated the Warrings.

The "protection money" angle was first disclosed, said Wilson, when investigators learned that the Warrings had attempted to conceal certain sums. This money, the brothers reportedly admitted, was paid to avoid prosecution for gambling.

Federal authorities described the graft charges as "purely a local matter" yesterday.

Held at Rockville yesterday as a witness in an attempted robbery, Miss Kiendl was released last night after Dean Acheson, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and a friend of her father, posted $1,000 bond.

Acheson had sent his automobile to Rockville to take the girl to Union Station, after Miss Kiendl had telephoned her father, but State's Attorney James H. Pugh would not permit her to be released until bond had been posted. Bond was arranged through Herbert Gallop, a clerk in Acheson's office, who went out with the automobile for Miss Kiendl.

The girl joked about her misadventure and seemed completely composed, despite memories of being forced from her automobile by a colored man and of fleeing across a mile of lonely woodland yesterday morning.

She said she planned to spend the night here with Mr. and Mrs. Acheson and leave for New York today.

Meanwhile, Edward N. Jackson, 27, of 640 Hobart street northwest, who was caught after a chase, was ordered held for the grand jury on a robbery charge. Police said he admitted pursuing Miss Kiendl in an attempt to rob her.

Jackson will be questioned relative to attacks upon three Montgomery County women last year.

Mother Knew of Trip.

Miss Kiendl said she had not decided whether she would go home by train or by automobile.

"But no more night driving," she declared.

She denied having "skipped" school, explaining that college was not in session when she left. She admitted, however, that spring vacation ended yesterday and that she has missed a day.

In a telephone conversation with The Post last night the girl's mother said:

"Helen has been spending part of her spring vacation with friends in Virginia. I knew where she was—in fact, I received a telegram from her yesterday telling when she would return.

"On her way home she simply got lost, that's all. She probably is excited and wishes to keep her parents' names out of it—that is why she said we didn't know she left."

Mrs. Kiendl added that she expected Helen home last night or this morning and that no plans had been made for her to spend the night with the Achesons.

At a hearing at Rockville yesterday she told of leaving her home Monday to visit friends near Middleburg, Va., after stopping at Princeton, N. J., to visit a friend who, she learned, was absent on spring vacation. Arriving in Alexandria soon after midnight, she became conscience-stricken at the thought of her parents' worry and the fact that Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, where she is a student, would reconvene the next day after spring recess.

Flees Through Woods.

She turned around and, reaching the outskirts of Washington, noticed a car following her. Between Four Corners and Wheaton, it forced hers off the road. A colored man left the vehicle and demanded money to repair a fender he said her automobile had dented.

He refused the dollar she offered him, Miss Kiendl said, and entered her car. She leaped out and ran through the woods to the home of Mrs. Thelma Lee, 9616 Fairway avenue.

Police were called and Miss Kiendl, who by this time was more excited than frightened, joined in the hunt. Police said Jackson was ransacking the girl's sedan when they approached and jumped into his own automobile and attempted to escape. The officers fired several shots in a vain attempt to puncture his tires. They finally overtook him when his car left the road on a sharp curve.

Police found on him Miss Kiendl's purse, containing $9, which she said she had left in the car at the time of her escape.

Pilot Fixes Landing Gear On Plane in Mid-Air

Salt Lake City, April 5 (AP).—An ambulance, fire truck and ground crew held a "death watch" at municipal airport early today when a transport plane radioed it had a crippled landing gear and was in danger of crashing. But Pilot Henry Hollenbeck repaired the wheel in mid-air and landed safely.

Felix Morley Named Trustee Of D. C. Library

Post Editor Succeeds Clarence Aspinwall on Board.

Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, yesterday was appointed a member of the board of trustees of the Public Library for a term of six years. He succeeds Clarence A. Aspinwall, who resigned last November.

Commissioner George E. Allen recommended Morley's appointment to the Board of Commissioners.

Morley came to The Washington Post in 1933.

Born in 1894 at Haverford, Pa., Morley was graduated in 1915 from Haverford College with the B. A. degree. Immediately after graduation, he joined the British ambulance corps in Flanders. Returning in 1916, he obtained a position as a reporter on the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

In 1917, he joined the Washington staff of the United Press. Later that year he accepted a post with the Department of Labor. In 1918 he went to the Philadelphia North American. He went abroad the same year as a Rhodes scholar to Oxford University, where he received his A. B. in 1921.

For seven years Morley was a correspondent in the Far East and at Geneva, Switzerland, and a lecturer at St. John's College, Annapolis. In 1929 he became director of the Geneva office of the League of Nations Association of the United States.

Morley joined The Washington Post after spending two years in Washington with the Brookings Institute. In 1936 he won the Pulitzer prize for distinguished editorial writing. He is a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Phi Beta Kappa and a fellow of the Royal Economic Society in Britain. He is also a member of the Cosmos Club and the National Press Club.

New Mysteries Hide Jefferson Memorial Plan

Some brand new mysteries attached themselves yesterday to the Thomas Jefferson Memorial project.

"The memorial commission has already selected, without making his name public, a sculptor to do the statue of Jefferson," said a Federal official.

"Contracts have not yet been awarded for either the statue or the memorial itself," countered another Federal official.

Site Approval in Doubt.

"The selection of the south bank of the idal Basin for the Jefferson Memorial has received the united indorsement of the Commission of Fine Arts and of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Representative John J. Boylan, chairman of the memorial group, stated last week when he disclosed the revised plans.

But yesterday—

"I can't say whether the plans have been approved by the Commission of Fine Arts," said a spokesman for that body. "We have sent a report to Mr. Boylan."

All Replies Secret.

"We have sent a report to Mr. Boylan," volunteered a spokesman for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. "I can't say whether the plans have been approved."

All of the replies were given only on condition that the speakers' names be accorded strictest secrecy. Mr. Boylan himself could not be reached by telephone.

Lone exception to the passion-for-anonymity rule was Edward Bruce, director of the painting and sculpture section of the Treasury's Procurement Division. He expressed dismay that the Boylan commission apparently planned to award the memorial contracts without competitions for the awards.

Scarred Felon Suspected as Torture Killer

Ex-Convict Reported Near Place Where Women Were Slain.

By the Associated Press.

El Paso, Tex., April 5.—A scar-faced, 29-year-old former convict was projected tonight into the investigation of the torture and slaying of Mrs. Weston G. Frome and her daughter, Nancy, of Berkeley, Calif.

El Paso authorities expressed keen interest in a telegraphed report from Kansas City police that the man, characterized as "desperate," probably was near the scene of the Frome slayings last Wednesday.

Hotel Workers Questioned.

District Attorney Roy Jackson, Sheriff Albert Anderson, of Van Horn, and Texas Ranger Pete Crawford studied a theory that the socially prominent California women were victims of casual acquaintances who won their friendship in a five-day visit in El Paso, March 25-30.

Authorities today questioned employes of the hotel where Mrs. Frome and her daughter stopped here—a few days before their seminude bodies, beaten and burned, with bullets in the heads, were found in the desolate mesquite and cactus country near Van Horn, Tex.

The tip on the former convict was sent here by Chief of Detectives T. J. Higgins, of Kansas City, who learned from two prisoners that the suspect left Los Angeles March 23 in a stolen car. The man left his companions near Phoenix, Ariz., and the police informants said he probably was running short of cash and might be traveling with a woman.

Woman Believed Involved.

Capt. S. D. Shea, head of the criminal division of the El Paso sheriff's office, disclosed that a man resembling the suspect and a woman companion were seen a week ago in Lordsburg, N. Mex.

Sheriff Chris Fox, of El Paso, said it was his opinion the murders were the work of a "dope-crazed person." He was supported by Shea. The former convict is a known narcotic addict.

Authorities agreed at least one woman was involved in the slayings.

Search for evidence continued on the West Texas desert where the battered bodies of the women were found Sunday night. Posses came across San Francisco newspapers dated March 23—the day of the women's departure—which the district attorney definitely identified as having been with the missing Frome luggage. The newspapers were found about 40 miles east of the spot where the bodies lay, indicating that the killers rifled their victims' effects as they fled.

Authorities discounted the importance of a youthful Army deserter held for Fort Sill, Okla., military authorities at Alamogordo, N. Mex., and for questioning in the Frome case.

Alamogordo investigations resulted in the arrest of a 46-year-old filling station operator at Cordell, Okla. Sheriff Oscar Doran quoted the prisoner as saying he returned yesterday from New Mexico. Doran said Alamogordo officers indicated the man came through Van Horn about the time of the Frome killing.

At McCamey, Tex., east of the area where the car and bodies were found, Sheriff Bill Fowler announced the arrest of a man he said was attempting to sell a woman's fitted bag and clothing. The sheriff was checking on whether the articles were part of luggage missing from the Frome car. Fowler said some articles in the bag bore labels of Los Angeles stores.

Electrical Inspector Would Kill Own Job

E. B. Maddox, Hyattsville, Md., electrical inspector, Monday informed the Electrical Contractors Association of Prince Georges County he would recommend the office be abolished when his term expires in May. The association met in Brentwood.

Maddox said he would not seek the inspectorship and that his action was based on the association's belief that duplication of inspections in the county were a nuisance to builders and contractors. William C. Heider, chief electrician for District penal institutions, and Tom Ward, deputy chief electrical inspector of the District of Columbia, spoke briefly.

Show Director Ends Life, Tired Of Being Clown

Famed Character Actor Leaves Suicide Note in Russian.

"I am so tried of being the clown day after day," Wadimoff had told residents in a rooming house in the 1700 block of De Sales street, where he had lived until a few days ago.

The body of the artist, who learned to direct and act at imperial theaters in prerevolutionary Moscow, was discovered in bed. One hand rested on a copy of a current magazine, bloodstained and creased open at the story of a recent "suicide pact," which resulted in the slaying of Charlotte Mathieson, 18, in New York City.

Wadimoff penned a note in Russian, addressed to no one.

There were three sentences, at the end of the note, written in English. They read:

"Good-by, my sweetheart. Be happy. And remember the little dog."

Willie C. Whitfield, colored elevator operator at the hotel, found the body.

As a boy Wadimoff became interested in the stage when Star Nicholas was in power. But when the war came, and the revolution followed it, he fled from his native land.

His life thereafter was nomadic and lonely. He played in many European cities. Subsequently he went to study at the conservatory in Milan, Italy. He came to the United States in 1927 with a troupe of actors. In October, 1936, he came to the Troika, after appearing on the stage in New York, Chicago and Florida.

Mexican Clergy Asks People to Help Pay for Oil

Archbishops Ask Donations; Workers to Give Day's Wage a Month.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, April 5.—Archbishop Garibi y Rivera of Guadalajara today called upon Mexican Catholics to raise a fund to help pay 17 American and British oil companies for their $400,000,000 holdings expropriated by the government March 18.

This move, approved by Archbishop Luis Martinez of Mexico City, came as the oil companies sued for an injunction against a Federal Labor Board order terminating their labor contracts with their 18,000 former employes.

The next step by the oil companies to have the expropriation set aside will be a request to the Department of National Economy for Administrative revocation.

By the Associated Press.

Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera conveyed to President Roosevelt yesterday President Cardenas' appreciation for Mr. Roosevelt's expression of friendship to Mexico made at Warm Springs last week.

Meanwhile, a group of oil executives representing oil companies whose properties were expropriated conferred with Secretary of State Hull, who said later no decisions had been reached.

The oil executives were W. S. Farish, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; Eugene Holman, president of the Huasteca Petroleum Corporation (the Mexican division of the Standard Oil of New Jersey), and T. R. Armstrong, also connected with Standard of New Jersey.

The Postoffice Department advised 45,000 postmasters throughout the Nation yesterday that c. o. d. packages again can be accepted for delivery in Mexico.

Expert Conceit.

When four average pairs do better than four expert pairs on a certain board in a match-point duplicate game, there is food for thought. That is precisely what happened in the hand shown below.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

In an eight table match-point game, four fair pairs and four expert pairs happened to get the North-South cards. Amazingly enough, each and every one of the average pairs reached the correct seven spade contract, whereas every one of the so-called expert teams stopped at six spades. Obviously a result as remarkable as this requires explaining. The explanation, however, is simple enough:

The weaker teams quite properly relied on the four-five notrump convention for guidance, whereas these particular "experts," with lordly disdain, relied on their own magnificent "card sense" to get them to the proper spot.

I have often been amused by the obvious psychology back of the refusal of certain players to employ control-locating conventions. It is so clearly a case of sheer conceit. Some of them evidently prefer to guess about a certain vital control rather than locate it absolutely, because if they guess right they can then feel so proud of their own shrewdness. Obviously, through the use of the four-five notrump convention, the bidding of the above hand becomes simplicity itself:

North	East	South	West
2 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

It is an almost incredible fact that two of the four "experts" did not think well enough of their hands to open with a two bid! This, also, is a mark of conceit which I have noted among certain type players. They feel it beneath their dignity to use the two-bid convention except on hands that are encountered about twice a year, usually preferring to reach the correct spot through the sheer force of their "brains and experience." Thus, two North-South teams produced the following series of bids:

North	South
1 ◇	1 ♠
3 ♣	3 ♠
6 ♠	Pass

After the hand had been played, these North-South pairs got into a fierce argument, North acidly pointing out how strongly he had bid the hand and demanding to know why South, holding the ace-queen of spades, which South had not guaranteed, had not gone to seven. To this, both Souths contented themselves with a snort of derision.

Prosecution Is Off In 10 Serum Deaths

With the Canadian product called ensol exonerated, the Public Health Service virtually completed yesterday its investigation of the deaths of ten cancer sufferers in Orlando, Fla., last week. "The deaths were due to the Philadelphia filtrate which was accidentally contaminated with tetanus toxin," said Dr. W. T. Harrison.

Since the filtrate was not sold to the Orlando physician but sent to him free for experimental work, the national biologicals act was not violated, officials said.

Counter-Squawk

A feminine voice in the telephone: "I wish you'd suggest that those persons who are kicking about the impending order (in Interior) to get to work an hour earlier because of approaching summer would quit the jobs they seem so to detest. Then persons such as myself—who want to work and don't care whether it's an hour early or late—might find employment. I imagine the whole squawk is coming from married women who have husbands to support them and who do feel a fine independence in lolling in bed an hour later in the mornings. Actually, they shouldn't care whether they get up at 7 or 8. Persons like myself, who have to work, would arise quite eagerly at any hour and even work some overtime. Won't you say as much to these married women?"

Delighted is Agriculture Local 2, U. F. W. A., at the results of a conference held with Dr. W. W. Stockberger, Agriculture personnel director. After the conference, led by John A. Schricker, of Local 2, U. F. W. A., and Dr. Herbert A. Smith, of the N. F. F. E., Dr. Stockberger accepted all points of a joint union program, calling for the enforcement" of a genuine promotions-from-within principle through comprehensive machinery providing for: 1. Thorough circularization first of bureau and then of the Department, of existing vacancies. 2. Noncompetitive examinations for qualified applicants not possessing the requisite civil service rating. 3. Right of appeal for applicants who feel they have not been given proper consideration. 4. Appointments from Civil Service registers and by interdepartmental transfer to be made only if qualified applicants do not appear from Agriculture.

• • • •

Local 2 succeeded nearly a year ago in obtaining a pronouncement of a promotions-from-within policy from Dr. Stockberger, but the forthcoming memorandum (personnel circular 46) did not express guarantees satisfactory to the union. Its appeal to other Agriculture groups for co-operation in developing a comprehensive system to meet approval of the Administration brought the co-operation of Agriculture Branch, N. F. F. E., Bureau of Public Roads Lodge, A. F. G. E., Soil Conservation Lodge, A. F. G. E., Farm Security Local, U. F. W. A.; Federal Surplus Commodities and Beltsville Locals, U. F. W. A.

Mail!

Regarding the impending matter of getting to work an hour earlier (this concerns Interior people principally), another communication appears in our mail box, signed by one George Driftwood. He says:

I note in Tuesday's Post that an employe who signs himself (or maybe herself) "One With a Passion for Anonymity" wrote criticizing the working hours in force during the summer months in the Department of the Interior.

I am a Government clerk. In the office in which I am employed the employes voted to advance the hours so as to start earlier and leave earlier. The office changed the hours.

The result of the change may be summarized thus: Ninety-eight per cent of the employes are satisfied.

By leaving home earlier in the morning, much better transportation is enjoyed by all except the handful who commute by train. In the summer the trip in the morning is much more enjoyable. No difference is noted in the winter. As for the persons driving to work, they save about 45 minutes, because they have to get down about 8:15 in the morning in order to find parking available, irrespective of what time they go to work.

In the afternoon, the 30 or 60 minutes gained by the early birds enable them to go to the store, play golf, see a movie, or perhaps take a drink before dinner.

The anonymous writer mentioned overtime. There is absolutely no relationship between hours of starting to work and overtime.

In short, if my anonymous friend wants to get to work half an hour or an hour later, he must expect to work the same amount of time later, and have poorer transportation both in going to and returning from work.

Tax Bill Given Senate, Swift Action Sought

Tax

"In making its recommendations, the committee has also given special attention to changes which will simplify the law and increase its certainty. This, also, is important to business. Finally, every effort has been made to adopt measures which will free frozen capital and allow it again to be productively employed."

To reporters, Harrison denied rumors of a prearranged conference "trade" between House undivided profits tax provisions and Senate capital gains proposals. He said he could not predict what would be done in conference, but he would stand on his committee's repeal of the profits levy, because he believes "the country is opposed to the principle." He considers the proposed 15 per cent flat tax on capital gains "the most important single modification in the bill."

Provision Irks Norris.

Administration Senators, led by Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, are expected to fight for retention of the 16 to 20 per cent undivided profits tax principle in the House bill, which will go automatically to a Senate vote.

Senator George W. Norris, (Independent), of Nebraska, said he did not like Senate elimination of the profits tax "at all."

"I think a corporation should pay something for the privilege of incorporating," said Norris. "There is no reason why they should be permitted to accumulate huge surpluses without being taxed for it."

The finance committee recommended substitution of a flat 18 per cent tax on corporate income, for the House undivided profits tax principle. Like the House, it proposed special relief for companies earning less than $25,000. These small earning corporations would be permitted a deduction from income equal to 10 per cent of the amount by which $25,000 exceeds net income. Harrison said more than 130,607 corporations filing returns in 1936, out of a total of 193,219, will receive more relief under the committee's proposal than under the House bill.

Other Clauses Given.

Gains from assets held by individuals longer than 18 months would be taxed at a flat 15 per cent rate. As an alternative, a low-bracket taxpayer could include in his income for tax purposes only one-half of the net long-term capital gains. Net losses from assets held less than 18 months may be carried forward for one year to offset short-term capital gains of such year.

Other provisions of the Senate bill:

Extends from 2 to 3 years the period in which a company may claim tax benefits while in process of liquidtaion.

Special relief for companies forced into partial liquidation by death sentence provisions of the utility holding company act, whereby certain security and property transactions will be exempt from immediate capital gains taxation. The net effect will be not to exempt gains from tax, but to postpone taxation until subsequent voluntary realization.

Continued Federal estate and gift taxes as in present law, throwing out the House cut to 16½ per cent in credits allowed the States for death duties paid. Disapproved House provisions for lowering estate and gift tax exemptions.

Eliminated the 25 cents per gallon increase in liquor taxes voted by the House.

Eliminated House excise taxes on imported pork and pork products.

Harrison has called a meeting of the finance committee for 10 o'clock this morning to consider a few last minute minor changes in the bill.

Nicaragua Canal Shelved for More Work in Panama

The Administration has definitely shelved plans for building a $1,000,000,000 canal across Nicaragua linking the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and instead is considering a $200,000,000 Panama Canal expansion program, it was disclosed last night.

The State, War and Commerce departments and the Federal Maritime Commission have filed confidential reports with the House Merchant Marine Committee stating the proposed canal is not economically advisable at this timee and that its national defense advantages, if any, would not be worth the cost.

Farmers March 2 Men Of Union Out of County

St. John, Wash., April 5 (AP).—Whitman County farmers escorted two union representatives to the county line today after handbills had been distributed calling for a strike on a rural electrification project. Only eight of the crew of 90 answered the strike call.

TVA

instant after the Vice President appointed it. Garner endeavored in vain to dissuade Borah from his decision.

McNary gave a variety of reasons, including the distance to Oregon, his need for a vacation, and the fact that he will serve throughout the summer on the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, since this is an election year.

Several members of the committee privately declared that some of the committee hearings will of necessity be held in the TVA area proper, possibly at Knoxville, Tenn.; Muscle Shoals, Ala., and that inspection of the seven dam-sites will be essential in understanding the situation.

Chuckling, they also pointed out that the Great Smoky Mountains are somewhat cooler in summer than Washington's furnace-like heat.

The TVA and utility records of the investigators were immediately examined for light on the members' views. Only one member has outspokenly attacked the TVA in Congress—this being Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio. On March 15 Jenkins vigorously defended the ousted TVA chairman, Arthur E. Morgan, formerly president of Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio, and planner of the Miami Valley flood control project in Ohio.

Jenkins' Attack Quoted.

On March 22 Jenkins assaulted the TVA, saying:

"The Administration is forcing this (the Gilbertsville Dam) upon the Congress purely to gratify its desire to foist more TVA upon the country.

"Already the TVA is a stench in the nostrils of the people . . .

"Why add $112,000,000 to the colossal sum of $750,000,000 that already has been spent or will be spent in the Tennessee Valley . . .

"There is no question but that this dam is purely and simply a power dam. It is part of the scheme of the TVA to manufacture power in competition with private enterprise and with coal and other commodities from which energy is created.

"It is little short of criminal for the Government to take from the taxpayers of the Nation this large sum of money when business is prostrate and millions are out of employment."

To balance Jenkins, the appointment of Representative Thomason, of Texas, pleased New Dealers, as Thomason, a member of the Military Affairs Committee of the House during the long fight by Senator Norris to pass the old Muscle Shoals bill, repeatedly forced the measure through the committee, and has a long record of support of TVA legislation.

"Judge" Driver, of Arkansas, usually a New Dealer (except for being one of the conservative bloc of Southern Democrats on the House Rules Committee who obstructed wage-hour legislation last fall) lives near the TVA area. A large proportion of the TVA power purchased by the Arkansas Power & Light Co. is consumed in his district, and he is a friend of Harvey Couch, utilities magnate, who heads that corporation.

Mead is a New Dealer without pronounced views on the TVA. Wolverton, while a Republican, has on a number of occasions supported New Deal measures.

In the Senate, Donahey, who was governor of Ohio while former Chairman Morgan was engineering flood-control projects, is known as of conservative tendencies generally. He is a close friend of Morgan; has never made a speech on the Senate floor or introduced a single piece of legislation; votes on the issues as he sees them and is somewhat critical of TVA on economy grounds. Some of his friends suggested jokingly yesterday that he might turn down the appointment on the ground it would interfere with his summer fishing.

Schwartz, invariably a New Dealer, has made very few speeches, is known as quiet and thorough.

Brown, expected back from New Hampshire Friday, has made but one speech on the Senate floor in his brief career, but that was a dramatic, lengthy speech on the public utilities holding company act of 1935, when he literally tore the utilities apart. The speech is still regarded by observers as one of the factors in turning the tide toward passage of the bill. He denounced the utilities then as "not a business, but a racket," and said on that occasion, June 25, 1035:

"I have seldom been accused of being an extremist in words or action, but if we fail to destroy this holding-company menace I say it will ruin us in the end.

"I came to Congress with the hope I might do what I could to put an end to holding company abuses and I consider it my duty to cast my vote for the pending bill which strikes a blow at those aggregations of special privilege which threaten the liberty of a free people."

The voting records of the committeemen on TVA legislation are:

On the original TVA act of 1933:

Senate—For, Brown, Borah, McNary. Not voting, Donahey and Schwartz (neither was then in Congress).

House—For, Mead, Driver and Thomason. Against, Jenkins and Wolverton.

On the amendment to the TVA act of 1935:

Senate—For, Brown and Donahey. Not voting, Borah and McNary, while Schwartz was not yet in Congress.

House—For, Driver, Mead, Wolverton, Thomason. Against, Jenkins.

On the Gilbertsville Dam, 1038:

House—For, Mead and Thomason. Against, Driver, Jenkins and Woverton.

Bridges, incidentally, made no public comment on the selections yesterday. Speaker Bankhead admitted that the House minority leader, Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, had been permitted to choose the two Republican Representatives from the House.

Uncertainty fogged the inquiry's first move. The eight remaining members (seven, if Donahey withdraws), as a majority, could take any action necessary, unless etiquette should force delay until Republicans can be found in the Senate to serve.

On Capitol Hill

Legislation to enable officers and employes of the Government to advise other American republics on matters of public health, highway construction and for technical or scientific purposes was proposed to Congress yesterday in a letter from President Roosevelt. Legislation already exists permitting United States military officers to advise certain foreign governments on military matters.

The President's letter, written at the suggestion of Secretary of State Hull, said requests had been received from "various governments of the American republics" for cooperation and advice of a non-military nature.

The question of whether to subject export of scrap steel and iron to Presidential licensing was debated yesterday before a Senate Military sub-committee by Prof. Bradley Stoughton, of Lehigh University, and Benjamin Schwartz, of New York City, director of the Institute of Scrap and Steel. Stoughton urged approval of the bill of Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, providing for such licensing, while Schwartz contended the legislation actually aimed "at price control over scrap."

Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, who as leader of the Philippine insurrectionists once gave the American Army some uneasy days, may come here to plead for Congressional approval of early independence for the islands, the Associated Press reported. Popular Front leaders in the Philippines were said to be planning to make independence the chief issue in national assembly elections in November.

The Wisconsin Petroleum Association filed a brief in behalf of independent oil dealers with a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday. The association contended the independents faced extinction unless legislation was enacted barring the major oil firms from the marketing fields, if they produce, refine or transport oil products. "The few powerful major oil companies working together, are able to dictate the price of the crude and refined product," said the brief.

Deputies Scorn Blum Program In Near Riot

Paris

Rosengart automobile factory was occupied by pickets and 2,200 workers quit.

The demands for decree powers precipitated such disorder in the chamber that its president, Edouard Herriot, suspended the session.

Jean Montigny, independent deputy, charged the Blum bill was designed to start "a veritable social and economic revolution."

Ushers stopped them and the Rightists shouted:

"Back to the ghetto."

Blum and several of his ministers rushed into the milling crowd and, with the help of ushers, kept the two factions apart.

After a 15-minute suspension, the premier, in reply to Montigny's attack, declared that from now on France's treasury would have to find about 1,000,000,000 francs (about $30,000,000) a week outside present sources of income. Armament costs in the face of the constant threat of war breaking out in Europe have strained French finances badly.

"Neither France nor any other country can go on like this," he told the deputies.

"Forgetting party and speaking as a Frenchman, I say it is necessary to have a stable government and a disciplined nation."

Post Picked As Midshipmen's Favorite

The most popular column was found to be "Mary Haworth's Mail," which appears exclusively in The Washington Post.

The most popular comic was found to be "Terry and the Pirates," also a Post feature. According to "The Log," which published the findings of the poll, "Inquiry brings out, however, that it's neither Terry nor the pirates who evoke this great interest, but the beauteous Burma."

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 5.—A group of German and Austrian refugees arrived today on the Antonia to accept this country's offer of political asylum.

They came as millions who now are Americans had come in years past—through the narrows and on up the shining bay past the Statue of Liberty.

For the most part the arrivals were a quiet and bewildered lot.

Most could skeap no English.

Baron George von Halban, a young Viennese, who fled Austria after the Hitler coup, said that he managed to leave the country with only $6.20 above his passage.

Was Army Officer.

He explained why he had left:

"I was an officer in the army, also I was monarchist. They knew that. I was unwilling to serve in the army longer under German commanders."

"It was difficult to get out, but . . ." and he left the sentence unfinished. "Anyhow, I always wanted to see this country."

Fritz Hertz stood on the deck with his wife and son and told his story:

"I was a merchant in Stuttgart. They wouldn't let me have any more merchandise. I had to close my store. I thought it was a good time to leave."

"I'm Jewish," he added.

Escaped in Boat.

A short time after the Antonia docked, Rene Kraus, former member of the press department of the old Schuschnigg regime, arrived on the liner Paris, saying he probably was the only non-Nazi member of the former Austrian government who was at liberty.

Nobody really knew the fate of Schuschnigg or his family, Kraus asserted, because a promise to spare the ousted chancellor's life later had been "declared invalid."

Kraus said he escaped in a boat dash across Lake Constance to the Swiss border.

Soviet Rail Head And Envoy Ousted

Moscow, April 5, (AP).—Rail Commissar Alexei Bakulyn was removed tonight after seven months of attempting to improve efficiency of railroads.

His post was assigned to Lazarus Kaganovich, "iron commissar," who had relinquished the job when he was raised to the commissariat of heavy industry in August, 1937.

Thousands of Welsh Idle Greet Queen Mary

Maesteg, Wales, April 5 (AP).—Thousands of jobless miners, their wives and children stood today in a cold rain to greet Queen Mother Mary, the first royal visitor to the bleak Lannvi Valley since Edward II 600 years ago.

Along the 25-mile route, the Queen saw the black cavities of worn out coal pits and the rotting buildings of workings abandoned a decade ago.

Cardinal's Letter to Nazi Leader

Sehr geehrter Herr Gauleiter.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Above—The facsimile of a letter from Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, of Vienna, to District Governor Joseph Buerckel, of Austria, has caused repercussions between Vienna and the Vatican and is believed to be the reason for the cardinal's visit to Rome for an audience with the Pope. The Vatican announced April 1 that the proclamation of Austrian bishops in which they declared their loyalty to Germany was made without approbation of the Holy See. The letter, to which the cardinal added "Heil Hitler" in his own hand, explains the proclamation and is translated as follows: "Dear District Governor: Inclosed I am sending proclamation of Austrian bishops. You will see from this that we bishops voluntarily and without compulsion fulfilled our national duty. I know that a good co-operation will follow this proclamation. With the expression of my highest esteem and Heil Hitler. Cardinal Innitzer."

House of Commons Votes Bill To Purchase Coal Mines in '42

By the Associated Press.

London, April 5.—The House of Commons tonight approved and sent to the House of Lords a bill calling for public control of Great Britain's coal industry.

The measure provides that eventually the government would assume ownership of all coal resources in Great Britain through purchase of privately owned coal royalties and voluntary and compulsory amalgamation of collieries.

There are between 4,000 and 5,000 owners of coal royalty rights, collecting a fee on each ton of coal produced. Some rights are hundreds of years old and sold with the land; others are separate and change hands much like securities. In effect, ownership of royalty rights is ownership of the coal.

Under the coal bill the government would pay royalty owners £4,430,000 (about $22,150,000) a year for 15 years, a total of £68,450,000 ($332,250,000) for royalties and title to visible and undiscovered coal.

Payments to individual royalty owners would be made on the basis of valuation as of January 1, 1939, and the Government would assume coal ownership July 1, 1942.

Money borrowed to buy royalties and £10,000,000 (about $50,000,000) additional for expenses, would be repaid out of mining leases to private companies.

Authority for compulsory mine amalgamation, where voluntary combines are not deemed adequate, would lie in the government's leasing power over the present 1,000 mining enterprises.

The 739,000 British coal miners, who annually produce more than 840,000,000 tons of coal, would be granted government protection against exploitation through leasing powers.

The net annual revenue of British coal mines is about £5,000,000 ($25,000,000) from which half a million pounds is deducted for welfare levies and special taxes. Under the new plan, government revenue from coal would liquidate loans and be turned back into the industry to strengthen it.

'Suicide Corps' Holds Tortosa Against Franco

Spain

ment of the Barcelona-Valencia road, the United Press reported.

[Both the main road and a cutoff were being shelled incessantly from the insurgent positions outside Tortosa and communication between the two isolated sections of government Spain was virtually impossible.—Editor's note.]

The insurgent advance continued east of Lerida. A decisive battle was expected about 60 miles west of Barcelona, where insurgents moving north from Tortosa and east from Lerida could converge.

While shock troops were demolishing the last government defenses at Tortosa, near the Ebro River mouth, Gen. Garcia Valino's army spread rapidly into Castellon and Tarragona provinces.

Detachments swept the secondary road net east of the main Morella-Gandesa highway, capturing Fuentespalde and other strategic villages.

The strong opposition of government forces defending natural mountain positions melted as the insurgent armies advanced seaward, overrunning a vast area ripped by shell fire and littered with the debris of battle.

Government troops dynamited bridge after bridge spanning rivers and mountain ravines. The cost of replacement would run into millions of dollars.

The insurgents announced that they had buried 7,554 enemy dead and captured 18,312 prisoners from March 9 to March 31, and had seized large amounts of military equipment. They destroyed or captured 29 government tanks.

A manufacturing and transportation center, Catalonia now is unable to get raw materials or to export products to the remainder of government Spain.

Reports from Barcelona said the government had ordered the balconies of houses and all metal ornaments on buildings stripped off and converted into war materials.

In the twenty-first month of the civil war, the government still has greater man power than the insurgents, but it has nothing like the necessary equipment with which to arm its recruits.

Britons Jealous Of Civic Liberty, Yale Dean Says

British interest in criminology exceeds that manifested in the United States, Dr. Charles E. Clark, dean of the Law School of Yale University, told the Crime Clinic program of the Institute of Criminal Science, in session at the Friends Meeting House last night.

"In fact," he said, "English people seem to show more jealousy in seeing that the rights of Englishmen are protected against overzealous police activity than fear of being overwhelmed by gangsters, for the government will be faced with embarrassing questions in the House of Commons if police questioning is too vigorous."

Hood to Aid Britons.

Hendaye, France, April 5 (U.P.).—The British warship Hood, largest in the world, was reported today preparing to leave the Balearic Island port of Palma de Majorca to rescue British nationals before the threatened fall of Barcelona or its destruction in a mass aerial bombardment.

Italo-British Pact Near.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 5.—The proposed British-Italian treaty will bind Italy to withdraw troops from Spain after—but not before—the civil war is over, informed quarters said tonight.

Italy has agreed troops also to retire from the strategically important Balearic Islands in the Mediterranean, these sources said after another meeting between the British ambassador, the Earl of Perth, and Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

These and the reduction of Italy's forces in Libya, her North African colony, were regarded as the major Italian concessions.

Loyalists Protest.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 5.—The Spanish government protested to France and Great Britain tonight against their nonintervention policy with its "appalling and dangerous injustice."

The note recalled Spain's messages of March 22 charging a renewal of German and Italian aid to insurgent armies, which now have split Catalonia from the rest of government Spain.

Agitation grew in Wales for a national coal strike to demand that the government allow the Spanish government to buy British munitions. The movement was started by Welsh veterans of the International Brigade who returned wounded from Spain.

Chinese Raid Invaders Near Shanghai Base

Guerrillas Band for Battles, Then Hide in Villages.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), April 6.—Chinese guerrillas are striking close to Shanghai at Japanese invaders who are already fully occupied on the central China front.

Japanese officers today said more than 1,000 raiders gathered 15 miles southwest of Shanghai and attacked the Japanese near Sungkiang. Japanese said the band suffered 300 casualties before it melted away. Other Chinese were said to have ambushed a truck and killed ten Japanese.

Village Reported Burned.

Some 50 miles south of Shanghai, on the northern shore of Hangchow Bay, Chinese said their forces had recaptured the towns of Haiyen and Haining and were attacking Chapoo.

Other Chinese reports were that Japanese burned all the villages along a 10-mile stretch of road west of Shanghai in a house-to-house search for guerrillas.

Irregular attacks broke out behind Japanese lines to the north as well as in the Shanghai-Nanking-Hangchow triangle. Hidden Chinese units struck simultaneously against Japanese troops in several sections of Chefoo, port of northern Shantung. Scattered bands of Chinese irregulars were on the march throughout northeastern Shantung, and many cities which fell to Japanese last winter were flying the Chinese flag again.

Reports in Peiping said Japanese landed reinforcements in Chefoo and attempted to use aircraft to dislodge Chinese, who were holding a section of the city.

Both sides asserted their forces held Taierchwang, center of a 17-day battle 20 miles north of the Lunghai Railway.

Loyalists Drop DefenseHeadin Cabinet Shifts

Premier Negria Takes Over the Post; Socialists in the Majority.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, April 5.—The Spanish government was almost completely reshuffled in Barcelona tonight, the most significant change being dismissal of defense Minister Indalecio Prieto, upon whose shoulders has fallen an enormous task during the past 10 months of civil war.

Premier Juan Negrin remained at the head of the government, taking over additional duties of national defense.

Most of the new cabinet members are Socialists, the political complexion of the cabinet being much more moderate than its predecessor, formed May 17, 1937. Only one Communist was included, instead of the two in the previous government.

Julio Alvarez Del Vayo returned as minister of foreign affairs, which he was during the regime of Franciso Largo Cabaellero.

The complete cabinet follows:

Home affairs, Paulino Gomez Saiz.

Foreign affairs, Julio Alvarez del Vayo.

Justice, Ramon Gonzalez Pena.

Labor, Jaime Aguade.

Public instruction and sanitation, Segundo Blanco Gonzalez.

Public works, Antonio Velao.

Agriculture, Vincente Uribe.

Treasury, Francisco Mendez.

The retiring foreign minister, Jose Giral Pereira, and Manuel Irujo, former minister of justice, were named ministers without portfolio.

Less Space For Parking.

In so far as the drastic parking regulations adopted by the District Commissioners yesterday are essential to safety they can not reasonably be opposed. As Traffic Director Van Duzer points out, intersections are the scene of 60 per cent of the appalling list of automobile accidents in Washington. Any move to enhance visibility at these points of greatest danger will obviously contribute to public safety.

In practice it may be found, however, that the restrictions are more drastic than necessary. If so, there should be no delay in making adjustments, for the parking problem here is already acute. Motorists who are forced to leave their cars on the streets for want of better storage space should not be unnecessarily harassed.

The effect of these restrictions is to make consideration of municipal parking lots the more urgent. Fortunately the Commissioners have already appointed a committee to study the practicability of such a venture. Apparently they recognize the absolute necessity of providing more space for off-street storage of cars if traffic is to be relieved of the impediment of parked automobiles lining every downtown street.

A few years hence cities may regard the provision of parking space no less important than the construction of streets for use of the general public. Such facilities could easily be made self-supporting. But if an enterprise so vital to proper control of traffic is simply left to private individuals, the municipal interest in getting cars off the street is not likely to be served.

By the time the Commissioners receive the report of their special committee the lack of space to park will probably be so acute as to overcome whatever opposition has previously existed to municipal parking lots.

Subsidies No Solution.

A rather mysterious appeal for Federal subsidies for the railroads coincides with a prediction by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that the carriers are headed for Government ownership. The two lines of thought are not unrelated. Should Congress attempt to guarantee the roads a fixed income it might easily prove a long step toward their direct operation by a Federal agency.

It is common knowledge that the railroads are in a desperate plight. Some means of affording the essential relief must be found. One school insists that capital liabilities ought to be adjusted downward—that losses should be recognized and written off in this as in many other industries. That proposal is usually coupled with demands for the merger of competing roads and better co-ordination of facilities so as to cut down operating expenses. Other students of the problem believe that operating costs which have helped to wipe out railway earnings must be ruthlessly cut.

Either of these methods would involve hardships for large groups. Any move to overhaul the railroads' capital structure would hit a large number of investors, including the holders of insurance policies and educational institutions. Wage and pension cuts, or reduction of personnel, would involve a considerable sacrifice on the part of labor. To avoid either of these unpleasant alternatives a plan for Government subsidies is brought forward. Under this arrangements, of course, no one would lose—except the taxpayer.

The fact that the origin of this plan is uncertain tends to discredit it. Apparently the sponsoring group is a little hesitant about openly suggesting that another enormous load be imposed upon the tax-paying public. The President, too, appears to have frowned upon the idea of increasing the Federal debt to make possible continued uneconomic operation of the railroads. In fact, the scheme is so far-fetched that its advocates would be well advised to drop it without further effort.

Government subsidies would in no way solve the railroad problem. On the contrary, they would tend to perpetuate uneconomic practices that should be corrected in the interests of the public as well as the carriers. For Congress to dip into the national purse to avert the necessity of increased economy and efficiency within an industry would be about as bad a precedent as it could set.

Perhaps the sponsors of this plan have in mind only temporary benefits to tide the roads over a difficult period. But once in operation a subsidy system is far more likely to expand than to contract. And if such a policy should lead to Government ownership of the railroads, there would still be the problem, among others, of more economical operation to avoid an increasingly heavy drain upon the Treasury.

Evading Responsibilities.

Congressional investigation of the TVA was rendered imperative by the public row between former Chairman Arthur E. Morgan and his co-directors; by the failure of the President's personal intervention to elicit the facts in the controversy, and by the resultant dismissal of Dr. Morgan. But none of these considerations provided the underlying reason for the inquiry.

That is to be found in the lack of precision in the legislation which established the TVA. It was the failure of Congress to define the power policy to be pursued by this agency which led to the split in its directorate. It is this absence of clear purpose which has caused so much of the confusion over the proper relationship between this Governmental enterprise and the private utilities.

Some, but by no means all, of the uncertainty has been clarified by the courts. Judicial interpretation of the powers of the TVA, however, has made it more rather than less desirable that its primary purpose be made clear. Is it designed to coerce the private companies, to co-operate with them, or merely to be a "yardstick" of their efficiency? None can give an assured answer.

Only a Congressional investigation, to be followed by precise amendment of the enabling act if that seems necessary, can eradicate the complete confusion which the letters TVA now symbolize in the public mind. For that reason there is every reason to be discouraged by the refusal of Senators Borah and McNary to serve on the joint investigating committee. That is, of course, their privilege. But it is also a vital responsibility of those named for this function to co-operate in making the inquiry successful.

Senator Borah gives a cogent reason for his decision against participation. He is skeptical of the value of a joint Congressional investigation and does not believe "in conducting investigations by the town meeting method."

This skepticism The Post shares. Frequently in these columns it has been pointed out that a small Senatorial committee would be better equipped for the task ahead than a cumbersome body chosen from both houses and sitting in an election year. But the fact remains that responsibility for the passage of the TVA act rests on Senate and House jointly, wherefore both bodies should have representation on an inquiry which may lead to changes in that legislation.

Senator McNary's refusal is more mystifying, so far as it rests on Mr. Garner's failure to confer with him in naming the Republican Senators on the committee. The very fact that the Vice President selected the minority leader and Senator Borah is proof that he places the desirability of a strong Senate group above political considerations. If the inquiry now fails to accomplish what is expected of it Mr. McNary will certainly be in a very poor position to criticize.

Much of the storm which has arisen over TVA is fundamentally the fault of Congress. Therefore, there is a double responsibility on Congress for the success of the inquiry. The President has not endeavored to block it. If prominent Republican Senators now refuse to co-operate they will be strangely derelict in their duty as members of a parliamentary opposition.

Sawdust Symbol.

Dexter Fellows, master of sesquipedalian verbiage, died a year too soon. For the "Greatest Show on Earth" which he press-agented for many a circus season this year has obtained an honest-to-gosh gorilla for its star attraction. Said to embody the strength of 27 men (a fact which, in the lingo of the tanbark, is "overshadowed only by the demoniacal ferocity of his appearance"), the beast is housed in an air-conditioned prison cell happily inclosed in walls of shatter-proof glass.

If memory serves, a decade ago the prize spectacle of the circus was a giant sea-lion which weighed several tons and was wheeled ponderously around on a specially constructed wagon. It was an apt symbol for the lush days of '28 and pre-October '29. Came hard times and the Ubangi women took the spotlight. Appropriately lean spectres, they displayed fantastically elongated lips which a nation gobbling at the trough of Federal sustenance seemed in a fair way of acquiring.

Now, it is a gorilla. With a glance across the Atlantic and another toward the setting sun, what could have been more fitting?

Ironical Favoritism.

Before final judgment is passed upon the reorganization bill the House would do well to seek perspective on that measure by drawing back and viewing it as a whole. To date the fight there has been centered on details. Whenever that procedure is followed there is danger that the legislation as a whole will become lop-sided. In at least one respect that seems to be the case in the present instance.

Leaders in the House have agreed that the Veterans Administration should be exempted from the provisions authorizing the President to shift executive agencies and their functions. There seems to be no good reason to single out this immense, expensive agency for such special consideration. If anything in the way of economy is to be accomplished by this bill, the Veterans Administration is precisely the type of organization which should be considered for assimilation into a more closely-knit governmental system.

In contrast to the privileged status promised an agency through which enormous sums are spent, the House bill would strip the Comptroller General of most of his authority. Students of government differ in their opinion as to the desirability of maintaining the Comptroller General's office in its present form. Nevertheless, there is more than a touch of irony in the proposal to set one of the Government's foremost sluiceways for public spending outside the reorganization program and to include in it the most effective check to unauthorized spending.

Of course, there is no powerful lobby to clamor for preservation of the Comptroller General's office. If a sense of proportion is to be maintained, however, the House ought to weigh the relationship to economy and efficiency of each office it includes or excludes from the bill.

The Race In Battleships.

It is 32 years since the launching of the Dreadnaught by Great Britain ushered in a new era in naval armaments. With a displacement of 17,900 tons, an over-all length of 490 feet, that battleship was a giant in comparison with even the most formidable of its predecessors. She would seem almost like an excursion steamer beside the big-gun ships now projected.

The turbulent decade that followed the Dreadnaught's appearance was one of very rapid expansion in the size of battleships and their armaments. The Hood, only ship of the battleship class to be laid down by Great Britain between 1914 and 1922, actually had a displacement of 41,200 tons. Even larger capital ships would have been built by the great naval powers had the Washington conference not intervened to put a stop to such manifestations of competition run riot.

However much the powers differed as to the wisdom of limiting construction of cruisers and other smaller naval craft, they were agreed that it would be to the advantage of all concerned to fix a common upper limit for the extravagantly expensive battleships. At the Washington conference this limit was set at 35,000 tons, with the caliber of the guns not to exceed 16 inches.

The expiration of the Washington treaty saw an effort made by France, Great Britain, and the United States to preserve at least the qualitative restrictions imposed by the pact even though, as a result of Japan's denunciation of the 1922 treaty, the quantitative limitations became inoperative. But in view of Japan's secretive attitude regarding her naval armaments program, and the suspicion that the island empire is now building warships more powerful than any on the seas, the tendency is for the others to anticipate such a development themselves.

Therefore, the Navy has asked authorization to construct three 45,000-ton battleships, at a construction cost likely to be not far below $100,000,000 apiece. Keeping up with the Joneses, so far as naval power is concerned, and getting ahead of them if possible, is understandable under existing circumstances of international anarchy. But it is also plain that the cost of such a competitive adventure is so staggering that only the richest nations can keep in the race very long.

That very circumstance may bring such hitherto recalcitrant powers as Japan to see the light of reason. In refusing to make known her naval building plans Japan has opened the door to repetition, on an even more staggering scale, of the post-Dreadnaught period in naval construction rivalry. But she cannot keep pace with the United States and Great Britain in squandering her substance on gigantic floating fortresses whose value is open to question anyway. In view of this situation the chances for another naval limitation conference are beginning to look up.

So What?

With mixed feelings we receive the news that Dr. Richard J. Block, of the New York Psychiatric Institute, has assured the Federated Biological Societies, assembled in Baltimore, that the chemical makeup of the male brain is greatly different from that of the female. We had aforetime suspected the fact but lacked confirmation. Having received confirmation, we are no happier.

With a knowledge of the chemical difference in their brains a woman should be instantly sympathetic when her husband drops cigar ashes on the carpet instead of in the ash tray on the table beside him.

And with this knowledge a man should make handsome allowances when, after he has explained the political situation to his wife, she says, "Now why on earth did you put on that awful tie with your nice new suit?"

These are facts. But if one concedes a different chemical composition in the male and female brain one must also be reconciled to the inevitably different reaction to the impingement of a fact. So the woman continues to worry over the untidiness of her husband and he continues to be peeved because she does not pay sufficient attention to his learned discourse.

Which leaves us exactly where we were before. It's quite all right, professor, to tell us what you have discovered, but just what are we going to do about it?

"Where would you be if it weren't for civilization?" a woman writer demands to know. Answer: Probably lying on a ledge in the sunshine not worrying about a dog-gone thing.

"What would you do if a dog were to attack you?" asks Albert Payson Terhune. We'd bite him and get our name in the paper.

Love may laugh at locksmiths, but grocers are something else.

Highway Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Tydings-Radcliffe-Kennedy bill authorizing the Maryland State Roads Commission to construct a series of bridges and tunnels in the State of Maryland is in line with progressive thought in the planning of through traffic routes.

The treatment of the by-pass via tunnel under Patapsco River south of Baltimore is admirable, and the reconstruction of the Crain highway would be a boon to Southern Maryland especially if it routed this national North and South motor route through that section. But after leaving Baltimore State interests rather than national interests predominate in this plan. Furthermore the interests of the State of Virginia would be subordinated to the interests of that of Maryland.

About 90 per cent of passenger motor vehicle traffic desires to visit the Nation's Capital, and commercial vehicles destined to the metropolitan area of Washington and points North would be served by a by-pass around Washington.

The plan previously suggested of constructing a high speed through-traffic highway using the abandoned right-of-way of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railway from Baltimore to Seat Pleasant, Md., and thence along the southern boundary of the District of Columbia to Alexandria via a new bridge over the Potomac River, gives a greatly needed cut off—around the Nation's Capital.

From this point South, the recently reconstructed Route 1 would be used. This plan would cost less and would better serve national rather than State interests.

"Horriblest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The inclosed clipping from The Post of March 23 credits a learned lawyer of the realm where the English language is said to be spoken most correctly, with referring to a libelous statement concerning our own Shirley Temple as "one of the horriblest of libels, etc."

Perhaps I am one of these uncouth creatures who are termed by the snooty Londoners as a bally, ignorant American. But when I learned my lessons I was taught horrible, more horrible, most horrible.

How about a credit line?

"Dictatorship Of Cars."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have often heard pedestrians blamed for accidents, but what are these poor creatures to do, unless they can sprout wings and rise superior? I often wait for half an hour before a break in the stream of cars allows me to cross with my babies. At places where there are lights the red is often safest, for on the green light turning cars threaten to extinguish us. Why can't we have a prolonged yellow light for pedestrians only? After all, legs have the claim of priority and surely in a democratic country there should be no dictatorship of cars!

I also think that a red signal, showing which way a car is going to turn, would be a great help. One's intuition gets rather strained trying to guess from the expression on a car's face what it's going to do. In Holland such signals are compulsory. But perhaps that would be conceding too much to mere hikers?

Poverty And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recently published letter in The Post shocked me: It was a letter, apparently written by a school teacher, endeavoring to excuse the crimes of felonious assault and robbery on the theory that poverty, in itself, condoned the acts.

I always read the letters written by your readers, but I have never before experienced such revulsion. I, myself, and members of my family, have experienced the demoralizing pangs of hunger and other privations; but—in addition to an inherent sense of honesty and pride—thank God we had the good fortune to have school teachers who taught us how to be honest, law-abiding citizens, albeit poverty-stricken and tempted to do evil.

In my opinion, anyone who excuses crimes of violence upon any theory or basis has unpardonably breached the cardinal rules of social behavior.

Summer Hours.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post, "Interiorite" heartily condemns the "summer hour" system established a few years ago in the Department of the Interior and all its branches.

His statement that the majority of employes of this department prefer the regular hours and that the system was never voted on by the employes is entirely erroneous.

I have been employed by the Public Works Administration for slightly over four years and have had the opportunity of voting on this proposition twice during that time. The first time was to get the employes' ideas as to the feasibility of putting into effect the 8 to 3:30 hours and to find out if they desired such a change. The second time it was clearly stated in the ballot that there had been a number of complaints about the summer hours and it was desired to know whether or not it was still the wish of the majority to continue this practice. The findings were not made public, to my knowledge, but it is reasonable to suppose that the majority were in favor of the new schedule, as it was continued and has been in effect ever since.

As far as I could learn, only those people who make a practice of "stepping out" until late hours object to the plan because it makes them lose an hour's sleep, while those who prefer sleeping at night and going out during the day are very much in favor of it. I, personally, sincerely appreciate the efforts of those "higher up" who had the "little fellow's" interest at heart enough to find out what he wants. Everyone knows that the executives' hands are tied, as far as most things are concerned, but here is one instance where what could be done was done, and more power to the party or parties responsible.

Let's See.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post tries to evade the issue raised by Dr. Otto Dietrich by implying that the charge that we have no freedom of the press in the United States is based on the fact that papers will not publish any and all contributions, however crazily written. That is not the point at issue. Many Americans—and the press might be surprised to learn just how many good, honest citizens who are not crazy at all—honestly believe that most dailies purposely play up one side of a matter, in the way of distorted news, write-ups of various kinds and editorials, at the expense of the other side.

The American press could go a long way toward clearing up the minds of many laymen by enlightening its readers on two points. One is: Who determines the policy of a paper, the men who actually edit and publish the paper, or the advertisers and other outside business interests? The second point is: If the men who actually get out the paper determine its policy, are they influenced by advertisers, or other interests? In other words, does the policy of a paper actually represent the views of the men who are responsible for the paper, or the views of somebody who has nothing to do with its publication? Would the paper's editor stand by his convictions regardless of any pressure brought to bear on him?

One thing we know, and that is, the views politically and otherwise of subscribers have no influence whatever on editorial policy. That was demonstrated in the last Presidential election. One thing millions of Americans would like to know is when a paper speaks who is it speaking?

I doubt seriously whether The Post, in all its freedom of press glory, will publish this letter. Let's see.

The Way Of All Paternalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears to the writer that we are confronted with dangers of social and political disintegration and decay that are little comprehended or appreciated by our people. There are many contributing causes, but the one that concerns the writer most is the change that is taking place in the character of our people.

It is disconcerting to find how the history of peoples and governments is constantly repeating itself, and the similarity of causes in each case. We find that the decline and decay of peoples, and the destruction of their governments that inevitably follows, has been due primarily to a change in the character of the people.

The interesting question is: What is responsible for the change that takes place in the character of a given people? Van Loon, in his very interesting history, "The Fall of the Dutch Republic," says it was due to a very gradual and very slow diminishing prosperity, caused partly by changing economic circumstances, but most of all by a change in the character of the people.

The most familiar and striking historical instance is that of the Roman people and their republic. The character of the Roman people began to change and deteriorate soon after the accession of Augustus and culminated after the reign of Marcus Aurelius. This once proud, self-reliant and conquering race degenerated into the scum of humanity. They ceased to be jealous of their liberties, which they lost, and then followed the disintegration and fall of the mighty Roman Empire. It would appear that the cause most responsible for the change in the character of the people was the policies of government — policies that are being paralleled in the United States today.

It is paternalism in government that undermines and finally destroys the character of a people. These influences are at work in the midst of our people at present and are being encouraged by propaganda and every available means, such as largesse from the public treasury, and all for political purposes and objectives.

Our people seem no longer jealous of their liberties, and every one appears to be seeking a hand-out from the Government. We see the inevitable result in a rapid and marked decline in the morale, virtue and character of our people. The decline in the character of our people is also accounted for by the large increase in our population by undesirables from abroad, and it is now proposed to aggravate the situation by welcoming the oppressed minorities of Europe.

If the policy of debauching our people and undermining their self-respect and self-reliance by governmental paternalism is not arrested and completely stopped, the time will not be far distant when we will inevitably go the same road of racial degeneracy that led other nations to their ruin.

The Post Impressionist

Hide-And-Go-Seek.

I LIVED on Rosemont road practically all of the first 10 years of my life. It was typical of any street in the cheaper suburbs of Boston. The houses were new, flat-roofed "three-deckers," with shingled walls stained green and the trim painted white. There was space for a front lawn, but no grass ever grew, only weeds.

During the summer I scarcely had time to come in for lunch. I always ate in the kitchen—bread and butter sandwiches with an occasional sly sprinkling of sugar, and my mother always made me drink a glass of milk. Then I'd run out the back door and down the back alley, where Willy Ryan would be waiting for me.

We'd amble up the street until we came to Joe Connors' house. Joe's father drove the local wet-wash truck, a thunderous, high-bodied Autocar. We'd sit on Joe's front steps and whistle for him. When he came out we'd all climb up into the truck. Because the truck was his father's, Joe always sat behind the wheel. Willie and I used to get in back and stretch out on the damp wet-wash bags.

Some of the other kids would show up about this time and we'd all wait for Joe's father. On days when he wasn't too busy he'd drive the whole gang around the block. This special treat always excluded me. It was one of the tragedies of my life that my mother refused to permit me to risk the danger of a wet-wash ride. She was kind and amenable in most ways, but her decision regarding Joe Connors' father's truck was adamant. Twice, by hiding behind the laundry bags, I managed to avoid the scrutiny from my parlor window and enjoyed the ride tremendously as a stowaway.

Another thing she never permitted except on infrequent occasions was "going out after supper." I was forced to sit on the front porch hammock behind the bamboo screens—we were the only family on the street to have them—while the other kids played hide-and-go-seek. I was a very fast runner in those days. Nothing irked me more than to see Joe Connors racing down the middle of the street ahead of the other kids and never having his "gool" caught by anyone.

One night I remember well. My mother let me go down and play for an hour. It was between 5:30 and 6:30 o'clock and still light outside. The lamppost down by Willie Ryan's house was always the "gool." The night I remember so well I was "it." Being "it" was a very formal procedure and the routine was gone through with great seriousness.

I placed one arm against the lamppost and buried my head in the crook of my elbow. One of the kids behind me made a circle of his hands and placed them against my back, reciting: "Bore a hole, bore a hole . . . right through the sugar bowl . . ."

Then somebody touched me with their finger through the hole and I swung around, trying to figure who it was. I failed.

"Count up to 500 by 10's," yelled Joe Connors and everyone scattered while I buried my head and rattled off the penalty as fast as I could mouth the words. At the end I polished off with the customary warning, delivered in a high chant:

"Last-one-caught-around-my-gool-shall-be-IT!"

After that I stalked cautiously up the middle of the street, remembering to walk straight-toed like the Indian in the Saturday serial. Out of the corner of my eyes, squinted frontier-style, I saw someone duck back into Joe Connors' back alley. I dashed over and came tearing back down the street yelling at the top of my lungs:

"Joe's gool . . . Joe's gool . . ."

The memory of that night is still clear and vivid. The long rows of three-deckers with the porches occupied by the grown-ups and the air quiet and warm without being hot. The excitement of the game throbbed in our veins and perspiration streaked the dirt on our faces. Through the happy garble of our chatter we didn't hear the hoarse shouting of the man with the newspapers for several minutes. What caught our attention then, more than his shouting, was his voice, alien to our street.

"Extra . . . extra . . . read-all-about-it . . . EXTRA . . ." The words made us pause in our play. Even us kids knew that extras meant something pretty important or terrible had happened. But we'd been fooled plenty of times when they put out extras all about something foolish like labor or politics or something.

Then I saw my father down on the sidewalk buying a paper and Joe Connors' father and Willie Ryan's father.

We heard what the man was shouting now. It was what we'd heard our folks talking about countless times over supper tables up and down the street. We looked at each other. The man was selling papers as fast as he could make change but he kept yelling all the time.

"Extra . . . extra . . . U. S. declares war on Germany! EXTRA . . . America declares war . . . AMERICA DECLARES WAR!"

We were only kids. It thrilled us with hot, fierce pride. We sat down on Willie Ryan's steps and talked about it. About war. Then, after a while, we sat quiet and looked at nothing. It was funny the way we sat there.

"Wanna' play 'nother game of Hide-an-Go?" Willie asked suddenly but he didn't ask anyone in particular. He didn't sound as though he meant it. But no one wanted to play. So we just sat there for a while longer and then we got up and went home.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Down In Huey's Bailiwick.

THE MAIL brings dozens, maybe hundreds, of pamphlets and papers amounting to thousands of columns of propaganda, and most of them are thrown away, some after just a glance, many in their original wrappers. In this manner, no doubt, many nuggets of information are lost, and it must be thus that I missed, a little less than a year ago, one of the most interesting political papers of 1937, the special edition of 64 pages turned out by the Daily Progress, of Hammond, La., to celebrate Richard W. Leche's first anniversary as Governor.

PEGLER.

This paper is a derivative of Huey Long's Louisiana Progress and is a journalistic curiosity in that it has no masthead that I have been able to discover after three careful friskings of the copy which I recently obtained through the courtesy of a private citizen of Louisiana. The masthead of a paper is that portion above the leading editorial which gives the paper's business address and names the publisher, editor and so forth.

• • • •

THIS EDITION contains the full-page advertisement of the municipality of Monroe, La., price $500, payment for which has been protested in the courts on the ground that it would be a political contribution to Gov. Leche's machine. It is the most rapturous volume of praise that I have ever seen, as fulsome as anything ever published in Italy or Germany to the glory of the Duce or the Fuehrer, but bigger. It is unreserved in its appreciation of the superhuman virtues and achievements of that handsome young man. He and the source of these tributes are no less interesting than their text, which is much too long to be quoted.

There is a full-page advertisement of Louisiana State University, "contributed" to the Governor's anniversary by "friends" of the university. There is a full-page advertisement of a State insane asylum, also "contributed" by its "friends." The Charity Hospital of New Orleans, the Shreveport Charity Hospital and Southwestern Institute (a college) each took a page through the "contributions" of "friends." The Louisiana Congressional delegation, eight Congressmen and two Senators, kicked in for a page. So did the honorable justices of the Louisiana Supreme Court, the City of New Orleans, the New Orleans Board of Levee Commissioners, the State conservation commission, the Board of Commissioners of the Port of New Orleans, the State highway commission, the State board of health and the cities of Baton Rouge, Hammond and Lake Charles.

There is a one-page ad whose sponsor is undefined but apparently is the State itself—a spontaneous tribute to a great man. "Friends" of Eastern Louisiana Hospital "contribute" a half-page testimonial of that institution, and "citizens of New Orleans" are similarly moved on behalf of the sewage and water board and the public belt railroad commission. Contractors, cement companies and insurance brokers add to the chorus of appreciation, all with good reason.

On two whole pages the Progress bursts into joyous acclaim on its own responsibility, and aside from the paid cheers there are 20 columns in width of photographs of Gov. Leche, one showing him in the act of receiving flowers for his buttonhole from two co-eds who are described as "thrilled, no end," by the honor and privilege.

• • • •

THERE ARE also four cartoons of four columns each, one of which depicts a check citing the fact that since the hour of the political compromise with the White House, known as the Second Louisiana Purchase, the Federal Government had spent $75,000,000 in relief disbursements in Louisiana. In this picture one figure says, Remember how these campaign spielers tried to scare us about Louisiana gettin' no money from Washington if Leche was elected? and the other says, "They were real calamity howlers. They had an old aunt of mine on the verge of collapse."

This edition was published on May 14 last, and the time of the wonder-man's second anniversary is now approaching, a date of which the many admiring boards, commissions and municipal councils and the "friends" of the lunatic asylum, the charity hospitals and the sewers doubtless have received reminders ere this from the advertising department of Gov. Leche's personal political organ.

Organ? Chum, that is no organ. That is the massed bands of all the official departments, State and municipal, in all Louisiana.

The Once Over

Der Fuehrer And The Psychoanalyst.

Doctor—Mr. Hitler, what I am trying to do is to pierce the background and get at the influences which have made you what you are today.

Der Fuehrer—I don't like the way you said those last four words.

Doctor—It is through psychoanalysis that we can explain the behavior, the character, the impulses of a man. Have you ever been psychoanalyzed?

Der Fuehrer—If it's good for me, I must have had it. Go on.

Doctor—Let us go back to your childhood. It's a very short trip, practically no trip at all.

Der Fuehrer—Never mind the wisecracks.

Doctor—Were you ever dropped on your head as a baby?

Der Fuehrer—No; that was Mussolini.

• • • •

Doctor—were you suppressed much as a child? Were you allowed to play with the other boys?

Der Fuehrer—I was allowed to play with them but I didn't enjoy it.

Doctor—Why not?

Der Fuehrer—Well, there were no microphones in those days, for one thing.

Doctor—Did you have any favorite game as a boy?

Der Fuehrer—No; any game was okay as long as I could be boss.

Doctor—Do you remember any incident that might have had a marked influence on your life when you were young?

Der Fuehrer—I remember I had a teacher who couldn't see well. When I would raise my hand to get her attention she wouldn't see me. I remember once I held my hand in the air three hours before she noticed me.

Doctor—In what way did that influence you?

Der Fuehrer—That's how I got the Nazi salute!

Doctor—You started out in life as a paper hanger, didn't you?

Der Fuehrer—Yes, and as I look back on it I think maybe that's where I got the yen for climbing.

Doctor—It is becoming quite clear to me. The paper-hanging business explains your passion for pasting everybody and everything.

Der Fuehrer—Are you psychoanalyzing me or abusing me?

Doctor—Did you have to lug around those huge books of sample wallpaper?

Der Fuehrer (bitterly)—Boy, were they heavy!

Doctor—I thought so! This explains your hatred of the old order, your determination to break away from the past. Now, did you, as a paper hanger, have much trouble with the customers?

Der Fuehrer—Did I? Every time I picked out a color I thought was good they would laugh at me and select something else. I liked big noisy patterns in red, yellow and pink. I liked green stripes, too.

• • • •

Doctor—I take it you liked what we call bedroom wallpapers.

Der Fuehrer (happily)—Yah! Yah! Green mitt purple flowers.

Doctor—I'm beginning to understand everything now.

Der Fuehrer—But, doctor, you don't know what it is that makes me ignore boundary lines, invade other countries and have such disrespect for geographical lines.

Doctor (puzzled)—What is it?

Der Fuehrer—It wasn't the wallpaper so much (wincing). It was all the trouble I had with BORDERS!

Fulpan Refuses Cabinet Post

Petunia Congressman Seeks Only Return To House

By Louis M. Jiggitts,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia.
March 17, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Ever since you made my cousin Poke Potts a Capitol policeman I have wanted to show my appreciation, and I am glad that I now have an opportunity. I have already suggested to the ladies of the two principal clubs here that we ask you to accept the new Secretary of Welfare, if they decide to have one, and I am glad to tell you that they are all enthusiastic. As Mrs. Fannie Sitz remarked, why shouldn't Petunia have a cabinet member?

Mrs. Will Wobbel reminded us that you refused to sit on the Supreme Court as you were satisfied with the seat you already have, but Mrs. Magnolia Thistle said that you would not have to leave public life to take this and there is no telling what it might lead to. Mrs. Sitz says she will not be satisfied until you sit in the highest seat in the land. She said you could occupy the seat with such dignity.

Please let me hear from you at once so that we can begin working.

Yours sincerely,
(MISS) PRIMROSE POTTS.

Washington, D. C.
March 19, 1938.

Miss Primrose Potts,
Petunia.

My dear Miss Potts:

I am sure that your splendid letter will cheer the Congressman who has been somewhat disturbed by the stock market. In fact he is conferring today with other leaders on the feasibility of priming the pump again in the near future. He is formulating a plan to supply more relief money and at the same time balance the budget, and I am glad to inform you that he is optimistic.

You want to know why Petunia shouldn't have a cabinet member. As soon as he returns to the office I feel certain that the Congressman will be delighted to explain why.

I can assure you that the Congressman always sits with dignity wherever he is.

Trusting that this office may have the pleasure of hearing from you again when you have anything important in mind, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia.
March 22, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Mrs. Will Wobbel about the stock market troubling you and she wants to know why.

I also told Mrs. Fannie Sitz about you deciding to spend more money and she said that that just goes to show that you are the man for the place of Secretary of Welfare. She said it inspired her to write a poem which she is going to publish in the next issue of the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette. She suggested I send it to you as you might want to put it in the Congressional Record too. She calls it a quadruple quadrant, being three four-lined poems on a generally notorious subject, with one four-lined poem on a specially notorious subject closely associated with the former, entitled: "Santa Now Plays Second Fiddle," as follows:

Money is supplied by Congressional laws
And when at the door the bad wolf gnaws
We do not fear his ugly jaws
For Congress is our Santa Claus.

Good Santa comes but once a year
We wait twelve months to get his cheer,
But now compared to Congress dear
Old Santa must take a seat in rear.

We have no need for worries today,
We gladly let the Government pay.
We laugh and laugh when Tories say
Some day we too will have to pay.

So Petunias to you, sir, C. Fulpan,
A generous leading Congressman,
Upon your shoulders you willing man
You carry our burdens as best you can.

Please let me know if you will be Secretary of Welfare so we can start campaigning for you and Mr. Slack said if you think you can spend more money and balance the budget you are sure an optimist.

Yours sincerely,
(MISS) PRIMROSE POTTS.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Washington, D. C.
March 24, 1938.

Miss Primrose Potts,
Petunia.

My dear Miss Potts:

I regret that the Congressman has retired with a headache again. He is worried over the bears having charge of the stock market as he is fearful that people may consider the market an index of conditions throughout the country; and while he is willing to concede that there is a slight recession due to abnormal conditions all over the world he does not want to admit that we are in a depression this year. The Congressman depreciates the idea of selling America short and prides himself on being a big bull.

I am afraid that the Congressman will not find himself in a position to accept the new Cabinet post. I am sure that he still feels he owes it to the country not to accept, and the other leaders here would no doubt bring pressure to have him remain in Congress.

I am also afraid that the Congressman's well known unwillingness to publicize himself will make it impossible for him to place Mrs. Sitz's excellent poem in the Record. As you know, he has a passion for anonymity. In fact he carries it to such extremes that he does not serve as chairman of any important committees, contenting himself with giving welcome advice to them all.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Sec.

Petunia,
March 26, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Mr. Slim Slack about you not being willing to accept the new place in the Cabinet, but he told us not to be discouraged because it seems to be the custom that when a man wants a place he immediately announces he is not candidate, which is the signal for his friends to begin drafting him quick.

I told Mrs. Wobbel about you being a big bull in the market and I hate to tell you that she was shocked to learn that you had been playing the market. She said we were paying you to be a Congressman, not a big bull, or a bear either, and she couldn't understand why you took up your time worrying with the stock market when you ought to be worrying about Congress like everybody else is.

But I am glad to tell you that Mrs. Fannie Sitz understands you not putting her poem in the Congressional Record and says your modesty has inspired her to write a simple little sextant, being a six-lined poem in your honor entitled "The Great Anonymous," as follows:

We admire this man of modesty,
Who has a well known enmity
For all manner of publicity
And a passion for anonymity—
For among the official fraternity
He is a magnificent oddity.

Mrs. Sitz wants to know if you would like for her to publish it now or wait until you are Secretary of Welfare.

Yours sincerely,
(Miss) PRIMROSE POTTS.

Washington, D. C.
March 29, 1938.

Miss Primrose Potts,
Petunia.

Dear Miss Potts:

I am disturbed over my good friend Mrs. Wobbel's evident misconstruction of my very able secretary's recent remarks. While I am somewhat puzzled over the recent decline in the stock market, I, of course, have no other interest in the matter than that of the general welfare of the country, and I am glad to report that I am now giving serious consideration to the subject with satisfactory progress.

I do not, of course, speculate in the market. You may be sure that my arduous duties as your representative in the halls of Congress, which duties I hasten to say are pleasures, require every minute of my time. And I trust that you will apprise my very good friend, Mrs. Wobbel, of these facts.

I do not care to commit myself relative to the Secretary of Welfare. The reorganization bill has not finally passed and I feel that any announcement by me at the moment would be premature. But, of course, my ultimate decision will be entirely controlled by the interests of my constituents.

Assuring you that it has been my great pleasure to explain myself fully in these important matters, as is my usual custom, and further assuring you that I appreciate the very pleasing suggestions of a constituent whose most excellent judgment I have always admired, I am

Your friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia.
March 31, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I showed your letter to Mr. Slack and he said now is the time to draft you. So we have begun to organize the entire county. Mr. Pinkus Pratt was in town today and promised to pledge the farmers for you and Mr. Cornelius Korntassel, whose job you saved last year, he said, when you stopped the recession for a while, has organized Morning Glory. Let me know what you think of this and when we should start the letters and telegrams.

I explained to Mrs. Wobbel about the stock market and you needn't worry any more.

Hoping to hear good news from you soon, Mr. Secretary, and thanking you for the promotion Poke wrote me he got, I am,

Yours sincerely,
(MISS) PRIMROSE POTTS.

April 2, 1938.

Miss Primrose Potts,
Petunia.

My dear Miss Potts:

In the Congressman's absence I can assure you that he will appreciate your kind suggestion not to worry. But I regret to inform you that I fear he will not find this possible, as it is always so much easier to worry in an election year. Of course, the Congressman does not worry over his own re-election, but he is sometimes troubled about his worthy colleagues.

I am sure that he will appreciate the efforts of Mr. Pratt and Mr. Korntassel. The Congressman has always admired farmers more than anyone, and he has often remarked what a pleasant coincident it is that most of his constituents are farmers.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Miss Potts:

I have been compelled to accede to the tremendous pressure of my many friends here to remain in Congress. I have agreed to consent to allow my name to be placed on the ballot for re-election to Congress.

Assuring you that I am deeply appreciative of your splendid efforts in my behalf, and trusting that I may continue to serve you in my present capacity, I am

Poke Potts Promoted As Result Of Suggestion.

Earle Opposition Is 'Inconceivable,' Says Pa. Democrat

Harrisburg, Pa., April 5 (AP).—Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence said tonight it was "inconceivable" that any Pennsylvania Democrat could oppose Gov. George E. Earle at the May 17 primary.

Without referring to Senator Joseph F. Guffey, who is supporting Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, against Earle for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, Lawrence said:

"It is inconceivable to me that any Pennsylvania Democrat, realizing what Gov. Earle has done for his party and for his State, could do otherwise than support him in the coming campaign."

Moonshine

By Paul H. Oehser.

About The "Cosmic Ice Theory."

A FEW YEARS AGO quite a battle was waged against a class of writers known as nature-fakers, who were the living proof of Pope's aphorism that shallow draughts of learning intoxicate the brain. The thing that made their highly imaginative interpretations of nature so potentially dangerous was the fact that people by and large will believe anything. As Stephen Leacock says, a half-truth is like a half-brick—it carries farther.

I am afraid that we shall have to put into the same class a book by H. S. Bellamy called "Moons, Myths and Man," which places the world's mythology on a factual basis to support a fantastic cosmology called the Cosmic Ice Theory, apparently unheard of outside of Germany.

Briefly, the Cosmic Ice Theory teaches that the moon was an independent planet captured by the earth about 13,500 years ago. It considers the moon to be a metalo-mineral body covered with a sphere of ice about 140 miles thick. Some day the moon is to come so close to the earth "that its cohesive powers will no more be able to withstand the pull of its gravitational master." After being "anchored" over Africa for awhile, the moon "will disintegrate on the planet's surface in a rain of ice, water, mud and mineral and metallic blocks." There will be "huge helpings of this turgid soup." All this has happened to us before, we are told, when the moon's predecessors similarly united with the earth.

• • • •

HERE IS WHERE THE MYTHS COME IN. "Myths," says Mr. Bellamy, "are not immensely exaggerated tales of local happenings, but matter-of-fact reports of universal events—which have been rounded off, interpreted, and idealized in the course of time." So through mythology we can know what happened when the last cataclysm occurred, when the "Tertiary satellite" (the moon's predecessor) distintergrated and settled down on the earth. Only so-called cosmic myths are of any value, and these fall within certain groups: Dragons and serpents, dragon-slayers, gods and giants, satan, myths of the great fire, deluge myths, deluge warnings, ark myths, mountain myths, tower myths, creation myths, Biblical myths (as the Revelation of St. John), etc. All these are summoned and interpreted to support the cataclysmic theory, for myths, we read, "have a real, material background and described ante-historical happenings of which only geology has up till now been able to give some account."

And as for man: "Mankind has been an intelligent audience, watching the development of the cosmic drama, its rising to a climax, and the solution of its crisis, from safe seats on the mountain heights and other places of refuge."

The book, thus tersely described, concerns three fields of human knowledge—astronomy, geology and anthropology. I asked five scientists in these fields to offer their opinion of the book—one astrophysicist, one geologist, two anthropologists and one mythologist. There was no dissension, and the consensus was: Nonsense, four; hooey, 1.

• • • •

DR. R. S. BASSLER, head curator of geology in the U. S. National Museum and professor of geology at George Washington University, has been kind enough to allow me to quote his opinion:

The geological part of this moon book is worse than the astronomical, for the author shows that he has not the slightest conception of the most elementary principles of the science. The good part of the book is that he has brought together the ancient myths, making it of value as a reference work. Unfortunately in trying to explain them he has employed all the old discarded theories in geology and has resurrected especially the catastrophic ideas that were given up many years ago. All the accumulated evidence shows that the earth's geological history occurred through a series of orderly processes such as can be observed today, and there is no evidence either in the rocks or in the present surface of any great cataclysms.

I had never heard of the Cosmic Ice Theory until I saw it mentioned in this book. An ice-covered moon is a great stretch of the imagination, for all definite observation shows it to be igneous rock. The idea that fossils were preserved by having the containing layers pack in alternate layers of ice is the worst I have ever heard; and then the thought that each one of the large eras of time has been marked by an influx of satellites is another great stretch of imagination. Finally, the idea that man sat on a mountaintop while all life was being destroyed repeatedly showed that he must have been smarter then than he is now.

• • • •

TYPICAL OF THE MUDDLED STATEMENTS in the book concerning the "rise and fall of man" is this: "Man must have been fully man, an intelligent observer of nature, a skilled builder of ships and houses, a political being, by the end of the Tertiary Age, the time of the breakdown of the predecessor of Luna. This means that the ascent of a definitely human stock must have taken place in a much earlier period, the Cretaceous Age." But man, according to accepted archeology, did not become Homo sapiens before the second or third interglacial period of the Pleistocene. From this time on human development is presented as a continuous story. Archeologists have not even found human remains in the Tertiary, to say nothing of a skilled builder of ships. "If he had reached such a degree of intelligence, we should expect to find some of his stone tools even though bones of so-called 'Tertiary man' are not found in early rock strata," says Mr. Frank M. Setzler, head curator of anthropology in the National Museum.

As for Mr. Bellamy's myths, Mr. Setzler asks: "How many really old myths do we have that have not come down to us through some form of recording? Even among our American Indians myths do not persist many generations by word of mouth alone." Which seems to me very apropos comment and to vitiate a great deal of Mr. Bellamy's "proof." Besides, if all myths were taken as fact, is there anything that could not be proved?

Since Mr. Bellamy's contentions on every score have apparently failed to combat accepted scientific facts, it may seem that undeserved space is here accorded his book. That is probably the case, except for the fact of its being published by an old and reputable firm. So far as the general reader is concerned, he should be advised to remember that myths are still myths and always will be as long as man's imagination is as fertile as we know it is. Scholars have spent their lives trying to extricate fact from fancy, and anything that would throw them back together again seems a bit retrogressive.

Soon Forgotten

When May Yohe was at the height of her career, she enjoyed (that's the word) unprecedented publicity. The flaring newspaper headline, the use of large cuts and the Sunday supplement had just burst into their most ebullient life, and May Yohe was fine material for columns, pages, double pages. Already famous as an actress, when she married Lord Francis Hope and began wearing the magnificent Hope diamond, all the while leading a picturesque and highly interesting life, there was nothing too much that could be said about her. She shuddered every time she wore the stone upon which hung a famous curse; she took no stock in such stories; she would do this and that in such stories; she would do this and that in England and this and that in America—and she carried out many of her assignments.

When an elderly and uncertain woman arrived in Portland, Oreg., by bus, telling some story of gangsters, the young and modern police didn't know what to make of her. It seems to have taken them some time even to assure themselves of her identity. Long retired from the stage and existing quietly after her three marriages and a career that would have filled a score of lives, there was none to do her honor, none to recognize her, none to detect any traces of that glamour which once cast about her head an aura exceeding the brilliance of the famous gem she wore to Queen Victoria's court. She who had had her cake and had eaten it, too, and in almost fabulous slices, was just a troublesome old woman with whom the police didn't know what to do.

Office Bill Foes Seek Decisive Vote in House

Offices

feated last Friday in a leadership upset that led to a series of "concessions" to the oppositions. Leaders believed last night that these concessions, and possibly a few additional minor ones, has turned the tide in favor of the bill.

In a radio speech last night, Representative O'Connor said the concessions were mere "bait" to get the reorganization bill in conference.

"Undoubtedly further concessions will be made—'anything to pass the bill' is the slogan of the proponents," said the New Yorker.

"There are two objects of these concessions: First, to pass some sort of a bill and get it in conference to be rewritten as intended; second, to furnish alibis to some members for voting for the measure."

He called the leadership willingness to permit stoppage of Presidential merger orders by a simple concurrent resolution a "flimsy" one, because the President himself has expressed doubt of its constitutionality.

He said exemption of the Bureau of Education from transfer "does not mean that it will not be gobbled up by the Public Welfare department next year." And he warned members to "watch" the Veterans' Administration exemption in conference.

"If I were ever sure of anything in my life," O'Connor told his radio audience, "it is that the people do not want this reorganization bill at this time."

En Bloc Vote Needed.

Militantly leading opposition forces, the Rules chairman earlier took the House floor to tell members "there will be no opportunity for a vote in the House on these separate amendments, referred to as concessions."

Technically, the entire House bill is an amendment to the Senate reorganization measure, and once the "Committee of the Whole" has completed changes, the bill must be voted on en bloc by the House. O'Connor unsuccessfully sought an agreement whereby separate roll call votes can be ordered on major amendments.

At the outset of debate yesterday, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn and Chairman John J. Cochran, of the House Reorganization Committee, made repeated attempts at a House agreement on limitation of debate to two, four, six or eight hours, or even for the day. All were objected to by opponents. Finally, an agreement was reached to divide time equally between opponents and sponsors of the measure.

Just before adjournment, Majority Leader Rayburn made another effort to end debate by agreement. Objections by Representative Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, and Ralph E. Church, of Illinois, Republicans, blocked the way. This determined leaders to move to close off debate today and to carry the issue to a vote.

Republicans Active.

Friends and foes of the measure took the floor yesterday with new ammunition and vigor after two days of respite following last week's failure to force the bill to a showdown.

Republicans, led by Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, assumed a more outspoken role. Snell took the floor to deny leadership assertions that greater reorganization powers were voted former President Hoover. He pointed out that one House could and did block the Hoover recommendations, and the Republican President's powers related only to the executive agencies of Government.

Then, shaking a finger at the Democratic majority, he cautioned against too frequent allusions to the small size of the Republican minority.

"You know conditions may change," said Snell. "It is a long road that knows no turning, and I think I can see a little turning in the road. You might not have so much braggadocio next session. Brag is a good dog, but hold fast is better."

Snell particularly criticized proposed changes in the civil service system and the Comptroller General's Office. He said placing the civil service under one-man control would "carry the merit system back 50 years." He said the bill would "destroy the power of the Comptroller General's Office" by making him subject to removal by the President, and giving the Attorney General "power to clip the comptroller's wings."

Democrat Joins Foes.

Replying to Snell, Representative Cochran said Hoover's reorganization recommendations reached Congress after the country "had voted to retire him to private life." He said adequate hearings were had on the 56 Hoover proposals, one of which would have transferred rivers and harbors and flood control work to the Interior Department.

The assault on the bill was taken up by a Democrat, Representative Fritz G. Lanham, of Texas, who said he was interested only "in preserving and maintaining the American system of constitutional government as it was given to us by the fathers."

Lanham said amendments to the bill are "immaterial," since "it will come back to us in a conference report that must be voted up or down."

"I am unwilling to confess impotency on the part of Congress to handle problems that so directly affect the people," said Lanham. "Congress created these bureaus. Have the children become so large and unwieldly that their parents can no longer handle them, and we must bring in some foreign powers? We say we are too busy. But the President is as busy as we are."

Representative Michael J. Stack (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who was elected two years ago over opposition of the State Democratic organization, challenged President Roosevelt, the State committee, and Senator Joseph F. Guffey, whom he called "Keystone Joe," to oppose him for re-election this year on the reorganization bill issue.

Stack said he would be willing to run against the President for re-election in his district, allowing Mr. Roosevelt exclusive use of the radio, "and still I would win." He said his concern was for other members.

Sumners Due to Speak.

Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, denied leadership charges of "organized propaganda" against the bill. He challenged members to wire back to their constituents, "and tell them it was only organized propaganda and you don't believed they are interested. Do that and see how far you get." Sweeney said the country "is aroused as it never was aroused before."

The opposition today expects to put forward a new spokesman, in the person of Chairman Hatton W. Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee. Sumner's speech in the House last year against the court plan many think marked the turning point in the battle to recommit the court bill.

Frank E. Gannett, chairman of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, yesterday asked that Representative Warren apologize on the House floor for what Gannett called "false and libelous" statements about Dr. Edward Rumely, executive secretary of the organization. Warren had said Rumely was directing a propaganda campaign against the bill. Gannett denied his committee is seeking "to destroy the President."

In a letter to a West Virginian, Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, charged that "pressure" for passage of the reorganization bill "was paid for out of the public Treasury, and you will have to pay for that." He said the Administration attitude "that the individual citizens have no right to protest is a dangerous straw in the wind."

Majority Leader Rayburn last night predicted passage of the bill by Thursday.

Chairman Robert Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, told the House he will offer an amendment to continue the present Civil Service Commission, with the addition of an administrator under the board, subject to competitive examination.

Ramspeck said this was closer to the President's original recommendations than the Reorganization committee's proposal for a single administrator. Ramspeck charged the Reorganization committee, and not opponents of the bill, were departing from the President's original proposals.

Slapstick Fun Still Wanted In Moderation

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 5.—Remember the old two-reel comedy, with all the pretty girls and the cops and the pie-throwing, which frequently was the only thing that made an evening at the movies worth while?

Well, sir, these same comedies still are in production, for a select clientele, which refuses to go inside a movie theater unless two reels of slapstick are on the program. The studios seem to be trying to keep their comedies a secret, for reasons unknown to us, unless perhaps they fear the demand for them will spread.

The three major comedy stars now recording their old-fashioned entertainment on obscure sound stages of major producing companies are Leon Erroll, Edgar Kennedy and Andy Clyde. They operate almost exactly as they used to. Clyde even looks the same as he did when he was aiming huckleberry pies at Mabel Normand et al., on the old Mack Sennett lot before the World War.

You can't possibly have forgotten him. He's the woe-begone citizen with the drooping mustaches, who's always being imposed upon by his relatives, his friends and his ever-present enemies, the police. That's the kind of characters he played 20 years ago; that's the kind he plays today.

A Scot in Tweeds.

We'd never have recognized him. Without his makeup he's a tallish Scotchman, with a soft accent, blue eyes, reddish hair, and was wearing a well-tailored tweed suit with leather buttons. He told us something of modern day comedy production.

"I make six two-reelers a year," he said. "Kennedy and Errol, I believe, make about the same number. That's not many, compared to the old days when Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd and "Fatty" Arbuckle and a host of others were in the business, but it seems to be enough to take care of current demands.

"There would be no two-reelers at all now, were it not for the fact that in numerous Midwestern cities, particularly in the neighborhood theaters, the audiences demand such entertainment."

Clyde said mournfully that he feared modern two-reelers weren't as funny as they used to be.

"In the silent days," he explained, "they took a lot of care on a two-reeler. They took from four to ten weeks to shoot it, they spent around $40,000 on it, and it had action and action-gags all the way through it.

Made in a Week.

"Today we have to make 'em cheap. We have a shooting schedule of from three to five days, and we seldom spend more than $18,000 on one of them. That means we have no location trips, few elaborate sets and not nearly so much action as we used to. Fact is, the average two-reelers today consist of 80 per cent dialogue. They once were 100 per cent action. That may explain their downfall."

Clyde's latest two-reeler is "The Old Red Mule." It's a hill-billy picture.

"And it didn't have much plot," he said. "I was an old codger who always was being 'done' by the heavy. It seemed to turn out pretty well. At least those few who saw it here in the projection room seemed to think it was funny."

Director of the picture was Charlie Chase, whom you also will remember as the slick-haired comedian who spent much of his acting career outsmarting his assorted mothers-in-law.

Six to Start New Spring Film Drive

The peak of production activity in Hollywood has been reached by Twentieth Century-Fox with seven pictures now being filmed, four in the cutting-room and six more scheduled to begin in the next few weeks.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band," a musical saga of the life of Irving Berlin starrig Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley and Jean Hersholt, starts its fifth week of shooting. Also in production are Robert Louis Stevenson's "Kidnapped," starring Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew and Arleen Whelan; "Kentucky Moonshine," a hillbilly farce featuring the mad Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin and Marjorie Weaver; "Four Men and a Prayer," with Loretta Young, Richard Greene, newly arrived British star; George Sanders, David Niven and C. Aubrey Smith; "Battle of Broadway," a swashbuckling story of the adventures at an American Legion convention starring Victor McLaglen, Louise Hovick and Brian Donlevy, and Shirley Temple's latest production, "Little Miss Broadway," with George Murphy, Jimmy Durante and Phyllis Brooks.

"Josette," postponed when Simone Simon was stricken with pneumonia, will resume production as soon as the rapidly-recovering French star is dismissed from the hospital.

Finished last week were "Mr. Moto's Gamble," the fourth of the series, starring Peter Lorre, and the ninth of the series starring the popular Jones Family, "A Trip to Paris."

Still in the editing stage are "Island in the Sky," co-starring Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, and "Rascals," previously titled "Little Gypsy."

Scheduled to start soon is "Racing Blood," the first effort of Associate Producer Jerry Hoffman, former newspaperman. Others to go into production are the fifth Mr. Moto film, as yet untitled, a Jane Withers picture with a Hollywood background which Herbert I. Leeds will direct; "Passport Husband," "Three Blind Mice," and another untitled film with a G-man plot to be directed by Eugene Forde.

Color Picture.

Greatest technical advances made in any recent color movie, according to President Herbert T. Kalmus of the Technicolor Corporation, will be brought to the screen in "Her Jungle Love," the romance costarring Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'In Old Chicago' Is the Screen's Epic of Fire, As 'The Hurricane' Was of Rain, Sea and Wind!

Anachronisms Do Not Mar Film Depiction of Early Days of the "Windy City;" Alice Brady Triumphs; Some Recollections; Cartoon School to Open; "The Dybbuk," in New Film Form, at Rialto; Notes.

"IN OLD CHICAGO" is a picture that everyone in quest of superlative and exciting screen entertainment will want to see.

It surges to an emotional and spectacular climax that seldom, if ever, has been equaled on the silver sheet. This, of course, is that consuming conflagration that leveled a city of tinder-box lumber, in 1871, and created in its place a metropolis of steel and granite that erected the first skyscraper known to America, put in operation the first elevated railroad and otherwise took its place in the forefront of the most progressive cities on the continent—not forgetting the World's Columbian Exposition, spread out in its classic beauty on the lake front in 1893.

BELL.

But there is a great deal in the film that was previewed by the drama desks in the miniature theater in the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon that I never knew before about the so-called "Windy City." Being a Twentieth Century-Fox production, the film was playing its home grounds. It also was playing mine.

Born within 40 miles of Chicago—the same distance as from here to Baltimore—and transplanted there at an early age, I thought I knew something about the nature and the early history of the town. Niven Busch, author of the story on which the film play is based, and Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levien, its adapters, evidently know infinitely more.

They have conspired to make Molly O'Leary, owner of the fabulous cow that kicked over the lantern, and her three sons, Dion, Jack and Bob, the foremost figures in the emergence of Chicago from a swampy prairie town into a city that really showed signs of going places. That is a pardonable fictional basis for a melodramatic recital that takes on huge and intense reality as it progresses through a devious path of crooked politics, amorous rivalry and official turpitude to that tremendous and overwhelming fire.

"In Old Chicago" is the supreme epic of fire, just as "The Hurricane" was of wind, rain and sea. It achieves the convincing semblance of a colossal and devastating holocaust. How it ever was done on the back lot of Movietone City always will remain one of the mysteries of the cinema's legerdemain.

For instance, I doubt that between the years of 1854 and 1871 anyone in Chicago, "big shot" political boss or not, ever wore a long-lapeled, one-button cutaway coat, as Tyrone Power does, when everybody else in town was wearing high-cut coats that practically squeezed cider out of their Adam's apples when buttoned. And when Alice Faye, as the New York cabaret singer imported to Chicago to impress the natives with her Broadway sophistication, sings "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny," she goes into a "swing" chorus that would more nearly coincide with 1941 than 1871.

But what of it?

"In Old Chicago" is a production in which the merits so far outweigh the demerits that it seems hardly worth mentioning that Darryl F. Zanuck permitted his foot to slip now and again.

The most impressive feature of the film will prove to be the exceptionally fine impersonation contributed to it by Alice Brady, in the role of Mother O'Leary. Perhaps the name "Brady" will account for that uncommonly fine brogue and Irish idiom from which she never deviates.

* * * *

Speaking of Alice Brady reminds me that she was one of the stars who personally contributed to the distinction of the opening night of the old Knickerbocker Theater, when it was first thrown open to the public. Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Carlisle Blackwell and numerous other headliners of their day, were on the program that night, but it was Alice Brady who was the life of the party.

She made her entrance running down the center aisle of the theater, mounted the stage, delivered an opportune speech, sang a song or two and otherwise comported herself after the fashion of a trouper born and bred—as well she might have, since she is a trouper born and bred. She was appearing then in World Films, of which her father, William A. Brady, was president, and only a short time before had been acclaimed by the New York press as the most promising young ingenue in the American theater.

Miss Brady is no longer an ingenue, but in "In Old Chicago" she makes more than good all of the prophecies that were made for her back there when few of us were as old as we are now. Heigho!

* * * *

Decorating this page today—I hope—is a likeness of Veda Ann Borg, featured with Dick Foran and others in "Over the Wall," the prison story based on a writing by Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, opening on the Earle screen Friday. Miss Borg employed fashion as a ladder to fame.

The whole thing started when she became a fashion model in her native city of Boston, Mass. There she made the not unprecedented discovery that to get anywhere in styles one had to originate them, instead of merely interpreting them. She was doing nicely as a designer when a screen test came along. The test was followed by a contract in Hollywood.

One suspects, from her latest photographic study in today's paper, that Miss Borg decided, finally, in her contemplation of what a handsome young woman might best wear, to take the short cut!

* * * *

The world-famous drama of "The Dybbuk," which has been translated into 17 languages and has been produced as the opera, "Il Bibuk," at La Scala in Milan, Italy, now is to be seen on the screen at the Rialto Theater as the most pretentious Jewish talking picture ever made. It will be interpreted for all tongues and all creeds by English subtitles, although spoken entirely in Hebrew. The showing will be on Sunday, April 24, and will be continuous from 2 to 11 p. m.

* * * *

So we may have our own local counterpart of Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Herman Perlman, well-known Washington artist, takes his typewriter on his lap, as of April 5, to say this:

"Next week I am going to open an animated cartoon school in the penthouse studio of the Albee Building. This school will be fashioned after the Disney studios in Hollywood, with which I formerly was associated. I am going to teach animated cartooning just as it is done in Hollywood, and we plan to show how 'Snow White' was produced. Primarily, my intention in forming this studio is to discover enough talent so that eventually I can produce a cartoon picture right here in Washington."

All good luck, Hermie—but it is a large order!

* * * *

Maybe-We-Need-New-Glasses Note.

In "In Old Chicago," Alice Faye seems to be just a trifle knock-kneed. Her general pulchritude in the role of the music hall artiste being what it is, however, this is not to be construed as one of the knocks!

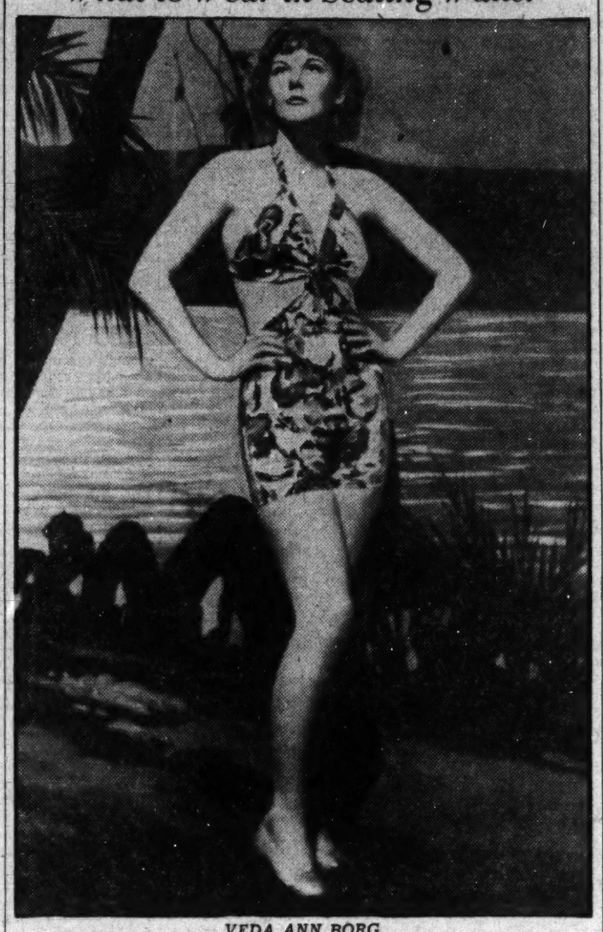
When Gary Cooper left on a vacation after completing "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," he sought seclusion by traveling as "William Grinnell." But everyone recognized him.

What to Wear in Scaling Walls!



VEDA ANN BORG,

the statuesque young woman who appears in a prominent feminine role in "Over the Wall," a new film of life in the "big house," coming to the screen of the Earle Theater on Friday. Dick Foran, June Travis and John Litel are other important members of the cast. One wonders if the title should not be "Under the Water?"

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 5.—Spirng is in the air. The birds and the bees—the buzzing of the dentist's wheels as he removes last year's carbon from my grinders. I made him close the window while he was doing it, too. Otherwise he would have gone with me when I jumped out the window. Story would look pretty: "Hopper takes love leap with her dentist." All he was doing was grinding on that certain molar.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Following that, a permanent wave. Yes, kiddies, when I go in for torture, I go the whole way. I thrive on it. And projecting under my little cell at the beauty parlor were a pair of men's feet.

I got right down on my hands and knees and looked up to see who it was, and what they were doing. And lo, and behold, it was only Bill Boyd getting his permanent.

You wouldn't believe me if I told you how many of our boys have to have them. I'll mention a couple which will give you a faint idea!

Jack Barrymore and Charlie Farrell. Charlie, when in pictures, had to get three or four a year. Reason—he had half a dozen cowlicks on the crown of his head, each diverting his hirsute in a different direction. A permanent wave seemed to stick 'em together.

And the look of agony on the boys' faces when they are caught in those machines would kill you. You'd think they were back to their old tricks of pulling wings off flies.

We lost one of our finest actors forever, due to a curling iron—Lars Hansen, playing the minister in "The Scarlet Letter." He submitted, under protest, twice a day to the curling tongs. At the end of the picture he went back to his beloved Sweden. No amount of coaxing has gotten him back over the Atlantic.

You all but missed Spencer Tracy's performance in "Captains Courageous" for the same reason.

Then on to a party where I heard nothing but moans and groans of despair. The country was going to the dogs. The host had lots $150,000 in the market that day. He had had to turn down, in the last month, half a dozen new projects. Why? Because it would have given him an increase in business to the starvation point. Last year he paid 80% of his income in taxes.

Did we know the banks were bulging with money and nobody wanting to borrow any? If you have the proper collateral you can get millions at your bank for 2 per cent interest. With no one taking advantage of it. If they did, the increase in their business might be so great that they'd have nothing at all left at the end of the year's work. Sure it's right to love your fellow men. But it's human nature to want your wife and children to come first. Oh, dear me! Did we know there were no unemployed in England? And here we have 15,000,000 and the list is growing daily.

It was all so muddled to me—such a crazy distorted way of helping. I don't get it, do you? But I'm going to take an economy course so I will. Then with my old fighting spirit, I said: "Women aren't supposed to know those things—so there!"

My host gave me an icy look and replied, "Why not? Your sex control more than half the wealth of this country." And here I've been happy on bread and water.

He wound up by saying, "Well—it's all right, women aren't supposed to have sense anyway."

It was spring, all right, I came home with such a headache and indigestion that I'm just going to skip the birds and bees and everything that goes with it. It's put me in a swell mood for the Charm School. But, I'm looking forward to meeting Gypsy Rose Lee. Roland Young told me she was one of the swellest eggs he'd ever come across. I head a priceless story about her trailer.

Seems Gypsy had the scent of crocuses in her soul, too. And wanted her decorations changed from mahogany to pastel blues and yellows.

She went to one of our swankest decorating establishments, chose materials and gave the order and measurements.

The following day they phoned and said, "Are you sure these are the right dimensions—that seems to be a very small room. 'Oh,' Gypsy replied, "It's not a room, it's my trailer.

The voice on the other end of the line indulged in a Shakespearean pause. And his voice all but congealed the blood in her veins, when he said: "Sorry, Madam, we do not service trailers."

Going back to charm, wasn't it Barrie who wrote in "What Every Woman Knows:" Charm is like the bloom on a woman. If you've got it, nothing else matters.

Rudy Vallee's got it, too. What? Charm. What did you think? I went to the studio and lunched with him a few days before he left. Believe it or not, he was reading a book on religious meditation. You know. Rudy has a New England reformer streak in him. He changes girls as often as he does his automobiles. The minute he starts to reform them they begin thinking of somebody else.

French Actress Starts Picture

Climaxing five months of careful preparation, Danielle Darrieux, European screen idol, has started work at Universal studios on "The Rage of Paris," her first American motion picture.

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., is costarred with the versatile French actress who appeared in 25 European pictures including "Mayerling," before coming to Hollywood. Mischa Auer has the comedy role of a phony Baron.

To present Miss Darrieux, properly, Charles R. Rogers, in charge of production, is surrounding the star with a brilliant cast. Henry Koster is directing.

The screenplay by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson is a gay story of romantic adventure in which a business executive and a millionaire compete for the love of a vivacious French beauty.

Costing more than $1,000,000, the production is to be lavishly mounted. Twenty-seven sets designed by Jack Otterson, art director, have been completed on five large sound stages. Typical of the film's elaborate backgrounds are a swanky apartment suite, an exclusive hotel, a millionaire's hunting lodge, the modern office building of a great advertising agency, many homes, drawing rooms and building exteriors. Interiors have an atmosphere of smartness in keeping with the mood and romantic gayety of the story.

. . . and I've already settled it, dear . . . We're going to send him to Princeton. He'll be a member of the Class of 1959 . . . What? . . . No, it isn't too long off to talk about it. I've already sent to the school—for a black diaper with an orange-letter 'P' on it . . ."

12 P. M. "We sent a telegram to Maury Maverick, in Washington," a student of the American Artist School reports at the Paradise. "The wire reads: 'Amazed at your opposition to O'Connell bill. We are convinced the policy of isolation is erroneous. Peace possible only thru collective actions by democratic nations.' The wire was mailed back to us in an official government envelope, with the official seal crossed off, and a regular stamp used. Under our message was written: 'Nuts! Save your money. You're supposed to be artists, not foreign affairs experts.'" . . . You're responsible for drawing America into the last war," Robert Benchley accuses Dudley Field Malone, at "21." "You were collector of the port, and okayed the sailing of the Lusitania, when you knew that it carried ammunition" . . . "I," Malone replies, "was under orders" . . . "Producers in Germany, Austria and Italy have bid for the European rights to 'Our Town,'" Producer Jed Harris confides at the Casa Manana. "But Thornton Wilder and I turned them down. We won't let any Fascist country see the play."

1 A. M. "Some months ago Beatrice Lillie saw 'Pins & Needles,'" Music Publisher Jack Mills relates at the Versailles. "Her mother heard the songs and kept saying they were ideal for Bea. Well, Mother knew best. And so when C. B. Cochran opens his new Bea Lillie show in London, the Britishers will be amazed to hear Lady Peel singing the International Ladies Garment Workers Union's songs—'Sing Me a Song of Social Significance,' 'Doing the Reactionary'—and 'It's Not Cricket to Picket.'"

2 A. M. "So last night I reached for my sleeping pill," violinist-restaurateur Fred Fradkin confides at his Cafe Boheme, "swallowed it, and slept soundly. When I awoke, there, on the night-table, was the sleeping-pill . . . but my shirt-button was missing!" . . . Jackie Cooper, now matured, takes the drumsticks in Louis Prima's band at the Famous Door, and joins in an impromptu jam session—while Jackie's mother beams approval . . . "Tell me," an autograph-hunter asks Songwriter Arthur Schwartz "which do you write first—the words or the music?" . . . "Neither," Schwartz tell her. "I really don't write those songs. The publishers just hire me to sign my name to all those tunes—because I'm a well known songwriter." . . . Balloons, containing prizes, are dropped from the ceiling of the Stork Club. One balloon drifts to the table of a ringsider, who finds in it a coupon for two free dinners, on Monday nights only. The lucky one is F. D. Roosevelt, jr.

3 A. M. "In Philadelphia last week," a publicist informs at the Cotton Club, "Lupe Velez was asked to appear on the Philco Company's television program. She turned it down haughtily, and Toby Wing agreed to do it. So Toby got nation-wide publicity as a result—for being the first person ever to see herself televised, on another machine." . . . "Oh, Italy," the proprietor laments at Bill Bertolotti's. "In Italy, the babies join the world and see the army." . . . "Did you know," an N. B. C. official states at the tavern, "that Toscanini's favorite broadcast is Phil Spitalny's? The Maestro told us he was astounded by the precision with which the girl-musicians play." . . . Jack Colt, son of Ethel Barrymore, exits from LaConga, enters a cab, and tells the driver: "Beverly Hills—but make it a flat rate." . . . "Albert Johnson, the world's fair scenic designer, just quit," an agent advises at the Cavalier. "He worked one year but couldn't get them to accept any of his great ideas. He says it'll be the biggest amateur show ever produced."

4 A. M. "The Ranee of Sarawak promised to send me some native objects, when she gets home," sighs Lou Richman, brother of Harry, at his Club Richman. "So yesterday I got this letter from her. She wants to send me—some human heads" . . . "More than 400 members attended the nominating committee meeting of the stock exchange," a broker confides at Tony's. "Before the Whitney crash, nobody attended such meetings. But now—well, watch. We'll toss out the old guard group and get some governors who will co-operate with the SEC" . . . "Everybody involved in that Grace Moore fight here last year has been back here, since," "Jerome Zerbe relates at El Morocco, "Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, Frank Chapman, Glady Swarthout's husband—and even the man who was slugged. Only Miss Moore hasn't been back" . . . "Morton Downey was the hit of the Jewish Theatrical Guild show," Lou Holtz reports at the 18 Club. "He sang what the audience clamored for—'When Irish Eyes Are Smiling'."

5 A. M. "There's a guy in the death house at Sing Sing who knows about some unsolved murder cases," a detective whispers at Reuben's. "But he won't talk, and make a deal that might save his life. So every few days a stranger is placed before his cell, where he can see how they slit his trouser leg, shave his hair—and then march him into the little room. These strangers don't go to the chair. It's all an act—to make this guy talk" . . . "I don't think you'll be able to write many more things about F. D., jr., in the night clubs," a Washington official declares at Dave's Blue Room. "He's received a note from the White House, cautioning him to spend less time in the cafes" . . . "The President and I both are members of the American Fruit Growers Association," Sally Rand states, in Lindy's. "I grow oranges; he grows apples. I sent him some oranges last week, and he wrote, thanking me—and promised to send some of his apples to me. Does the President know I dress like Eve?"

6 A. M. ". . . yes, dear, this world appears to be mad . . . But I'm sure everything will be okay, and some day we'll all make a lot of money . . . "What? . . . Then we'll have to pay big taxes to our Government?" . . . "Well, can you think of a better government to pay it to?"

Design Costumes For French Star

Elaborate costumes that Danielle Darieux will wear for her American film debut in "The Rage of Paris," which went into production at Universal studios last week, are all being created and designed in Hollywood instead of Paris.

Although the European screen idol brought 17 trunks of smart clothes with her from the French style capital, many are for personal use.

This was revealed recently when Very West, studio fashion designer, had more than 50 expert seamstresses and dressmakers putting final touches to an array of gowns, wraps, jackets and other feminine apparel which the talented French actress will display in the B. G. DeSylva production.

Birth Control Group Scores Miss Lenroot

Children's Bureau Responds Least to Movement, Speakers Say.

Of all agencies asked to co-operate in the birth control movement, the least response is being received from the Children's Bureau, which it was felt should be particularly interested, it was declared yesterday at annual meeting of the Mothers Health Association at 715 E street southwest.

Despite protests, the bureau is refusing to recognize birth control, according to association workers.

Mrs. Bernice Wickham, secretary to Margaret Sanger, urged the Washington group to write letters and make personal visits to bureau offices.

Miss Lenroot Quoted.

Of the 2,000,000 babies born in this country last year, more than 1,000,000 of them went to families who were on relief or had incomes of less than $1,250, one of the delegates said she had heard at a recent congress on better babies and mothers.

Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, was represented as saying at the congress that she was interested only in the health aspects of the problem and not the economic.

"The two cannot be separated, especially in these hard times," remarked Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president of the asociation and chairman of the meeting.

Clinic Board Re-elected.

Reports on progres made at the E street clinic of the association since its opening in August were given by Miss Phyllis Murphy, nurse, and Dr. Agnes McNutt, clinician.

Average clinic attendance has grown from 10 the first month to more than 50 a month, Dr. McNutt's report showed. In addition, premarital advice and general health help are being given.

Upon a motion by Mrs. Worth B. Daniels, the board of trustees for the clinic was re-elected, as follows: Mrs. Willson, president; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice president; Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley, secretary; Mrs. Lewis C. Ecker, treasurer; Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Miss Milton W. King, Frederick A. Ballard, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy and George Hewitt Myers.

$1,125 Held Lost From Seat of Car

A brooch valued at $1,000, a $50 watch and $75 in cash was either lost or stolen, Dr. Dela Ledendecker, chiropractor, of 3025 O street northwest, told police yesterday.

She said the valuables were in her pocketbook on the seat of her automobile beside her and believes somebody reached in and took the purse when she stopped for a traffic light.

President Rules Out Industrial, Rail Subsidies

Rail

operations under wartime conditions could not be compared with peacetime operations. During the war he said the purpose was to move freight and troops quickly. Frequently trackage was laid down to reach those objectives which everyone knew would not be necessary in peacetime.

On the other hand, he said that ecenomies and efficiency in operation were achieved under the able direction of Daniel Willard, the Government administrator. As an example, he pointed out the "consolidated ticket offices" maintained in many large cities during the war period. Another example, he said, was the "pool" for freight cars which diminished in large part the waste that results from bringing back empty cars.

Without Government ownership or operation, the President asserted, many of these economies could again be achieved to the benefit of the railroads. He left the impression that he thought such consolidations and pooling should be effected voluntarily by the railroads.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to discuss the nature of the recommendations he would make to Congress for solution of the railroad problem or to say whether he would concern himself in that message with both an immediate and a long-range program—or would propose only steps to tide the carriers over present difficulties.

To Attack Report.

An answer to such questions, he said, must wait until his message to Congress goes forth, probably next Tuesday. He said he would attach to his message the report on railroads submitted to him by Interstate Commerce Commission Chairman Walter W. M. Splawn and two of his associates, Joseph B. Eastman and Charles D. Mahaffie. This report has not been made public, but its highlights were reported in The Post yesterday.

More specific information regarding contents of the Splawn report was learned yesterday. Establishment of a court or tribunal for the sole task of handling reorganization of railroads in receivership was proposed by the report as one means of facilitating such reorganizations. It also proposed that Section 77A of the bankruptcy act be amended to diminish the power of minority stockholders in blocking reorganization plans.

It was further learned the Splawn report does not propose any machinery to compel consolidations and co-ordination of railroad properties. The Transportation Board or Authority proposed in that report would be charged with the duty of formulating such programs and seeking to prevail on the railroads to adopt them.

Several hours before his press conference the President discussed the railroad situation with Reconstruction Finance Corporation Chairman Jesse Jones. Leaving the White House, Jones emphasized that the railroads needed immediate help. He doubted that legislation embracing a permanent railroad program could be adopted at this session of Congress.

He pointed out that whenever such legislation is proposed many groups from all parts of the country wish to be heard and that this takes time. Jones said the RFC stood ready to give financial help to those carriers which had security to offer for loans. But, he emphasized, the railroads "need earnings instead of loans."

The RFC chairman said he believed business would pick up and that at some time in the future railroads would enjoy a better volume of traffic, but he declined to predict when that would happen. He said undoubtedly some railroads needed to be reorganized and have their fixed charges reduced with security holders being forced to take losses.

Senator Wheeler recalled that a few years ago he introduced a bill for Government ownership of the railroads through purchase by a Federal corporation. At that time there was no favorable response from railroads, railway labor and holders of securities of the carriers, he said.

"I hesitate at this time to reoffer the legislation in view of the way some Government bureaus are being kicked around," he said, adding, however, that Government ownership was preferable to payment of a subsidy, through Government guaranteeing of railroad bonds and their interest payments, as had been suggested.

"But I do not want to see the Government take over the railroads on a basis of paying anything like 100 cents on the dollar for securities on the basis of Interstate Commerce Commission valuation. It is apparent to me that too many railroads cannot even earn interest and dividends at valuations placed on them by the I. C. C. Many bondholders and stockholders would like to have the Government take the railroads over and pay something like the face value of outstanding securities.

"A number of railroads should go through reorganization and have their capital structures materially cut down. It seems ridiculous to me to think that some of these carriers can pay the fixed charges now confronting them. The sooner security holders realize this fact and stop crying about expedients through more government money, the better it will be for them, the railroads and the public generally. If they do not want Government ownership, then they better have reorganization and a general cutting of capital structure."

Parking Rules Are Revised to Aid Pedestrians

Traffic

the intersection, the safe approach speed of vehicles is only 14 miles per hour, he said. With the new regulation, Van Duzer added, cars may approach in safety at 22 miles per hour.

Asked if he was expecting adverse reaction to the new rule, the traffic director declared:

"The only flareback we expect is from motorists who are not interested in preventing accidents. We have considered this move for several years and it is primarily a safety measure."

Harry Wender, chairman of the safety committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, characterized the new regulations as "marvelous."

"The regulations are sound and are for the public safety," he said. "If they had been presented to the federation I feel sure they would have been indorsed."

At its meeting Saturday night the federation voted down, 19 to 18, a resolution which would increase from 25 to 50 feet the distance parking would be prohibited from the curb line of intersections.

The Federation did pass a resolution that all measured distances where parking is prohibited should be clearly marked on the curb.

They approved also the Dirksen bill which would authorize the District Commissioners to acquire municipal parking lots which would be rented at reasonable rates.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who has been an advocate of municipal parking garages, said that "streets are for moving traffic. To solve the parking problem brought about by decreasing the amount of street parking space, we need at least 12 four-story open-air parking garages in the down-town area."

Col. L. C. Crawford, chariman of the Board of Trade traffic committee, said he approved of the change "in general."

"The rule prohibiting parking withn 20 feet of the building line will offer much-needed protection for pedestrians, but I am not convinced of the necessity of the 100-foot rule."

Parking too close to intersections, Col. Crawford pointed out, has long been a hazard to pedestrians. Although the new law will work hardships on many, it will "at least give the poor pedestrian a break," he said.

Space for the parking of two cars between the National Theater and the Munsey Building was reserved by another order by the Commissioners for members of Congress and Government officials.

Parking on the south side of I street between Thirteenth and Twentieth streets northwest will be permitted after 6 p. m. The present regulation bans parking at any time.

MEL KOONTZ—FAMOUS HOLLYWOOD WILD ANIMAL TAMER—WRESTLES WITH A FULL-GROWN LION!

HERE'S MEL KOONTZ alone in the cage with four hundred and fifty pounds of lion. The huge lion crouches—then springs straight at Koontz. Nerves cool as ice, Mel meets the charge head on. Man and lion clinch. Onlookers feel their nerves grow tense. With the lion's jaw only inches from his throat, Mel shows himself complete master of the savage beast. No doubt about his nerves being healthy! And, as Mel points out, one of the differences he finds between Camels and other cigarettes has to do with having healthy nerves. Mel says: "No matter how many I smoke, Camels don't frazzle my nerves."

"I'll say it makes a difference to me what cigarette I smoke"
SAYS MEL KOONTZ TO PENN PHILLIPS

"I guess you have to be particular about your cigarette, Mel. I've often wondered if Camels are different from other kinds?"
"Take it from me, Penn, any one-cigarette's-as-good-as-another talk is the bunk. There are a lot of angles to consider in smoking. Camel is the cigarette I know really agrees with me on all counts. That packs a lot of meaning because I smoke a lot of Camels. They're different all right. My hat's off to 'em for real, natural mildness—the kind that doesn't get my nerves ragged—or make my throat raspy—or get flat-tasting. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

AFTER MEL KOONTZ had been schooling tigers for a new movie, Penn Phillips got to talking with him on the difference between cigarettes. Perhaps you, too, have wondered if there is a distinct difference between Camels and other cigarettes. Mel Koontz gives his slant on that question, above. And millions of other men and women find what they want in Camels. One smoker tells another: "Camels agree with me!" Yes, those costlier tobaccos in Camels do make a difference!

Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic

ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER . . . "Camels agree with me"

"WE CHOOSE CAMELS FOR OUR OWN SMOKING. WE KNOW TOBACCO"
—SAY THESE TOBACCO PLANTERS

"I know the kind of tobacco used for making various cigarettes," says Mr. Beckham Wright, who has spent 19 years growing tobacco—knows it from the ground up. "Camel got my choice grades last year—and many years back," he adds. "I'm talking about what I know when I say Camels are made from MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS."

Mr. George Crumbaugh, another well-known planter, had a fine tobacco crop last year. "My best yet," he says. "And the Camel people bought all the choice lots—paid me more than I ever got before, too. Naturally, Camel's the cigarette I smoke myself. Fact is, most planters favor Camels. So I know that Camels use finer tobaccos."

"I've grown over 87,000 pounds of tobacco in the past five years," says this successful planter, Mr. Cecil White, of Danville, Kentucky. "The best of my last crop went to the Camel people at the best prices, as it so often does. Most of the other planters around here sold their best grades to Camel, too. I stick to Camels and I know I'm smoking choice tobaccos."

"My brothers and I have been planting tobacco for 21 years," Mr. John Wallace, Jr. says. "Camel bought every pound of my last crop that was top grade—bought up most of the finer tobacco in this section, too. I've been smoking Camels for 17-18 years now. And most other planters are like me—we're Camel smokers because we know what it means to smoke finer tobacco."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

One Girl, Disliking Another, Tries to Persuade Third to Join Her in Boycott; What Should She Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is a problem concerning three girls. One of the girls, whom I shall call Helen, has always disliked another girl, whom I shall call Mary. Now Mary really is a very nice girl. She is kind, generous, friendly, sympathetic, a good sport and has a very even disposition. However, she has one outstanding fault. She is too sex conscious. The minute a man enters the room, she changes completely; plays up to him and acts so silly that all of us are embarrased. Another fault is her vanity. She is extremely attractive and likes to be told about it, and invites compliments by disparaging herself in comparison with someone else. This irritates us and we talk about it among ourselves, but all in all, she is a very nice girl.

• • • •

Helen has never liked Mary. Helen is very clever but not at all attractive. She has a very uneven disposition. She goes on what we call a "grouch" for days at a time and hardly speaks to any of us. But when she gets over it she is swell. Also, she has a very sharp tongue and is constantly saying hurtful things. Yet she is kind, extremely generous and would do anything in the world for those she likes. However, for her there is no in-between. Either she likes you or she hates you.

• • • •

Helen happens to be very fond of the third girl, whom I shall call Jane. Jane overlooks Helen's faults and gets along with her very well. As between Helen and Mary, however, she believes there is more to be said for the latter. If Mary wants to make a fool of herself, that is her business and doesn't hurt anyone but herself. Whereas Helen's sharp tongue and tantrums do hurt others.

• • • •

But here is the problem: Helen and Mary have stopped speaking, except when absolutely necessary. There was on quarrel. Helen just decided if you don't like someone, the best thing to do is to ignore that person. Now she tells Jane that one is a hypocrite in being nice to a person one dislikes. But Jane argues that we should overlook the other person's faults and try to like him in spite of them, on the theory that the other person probably finds just as much to dislike about us.

• • • •

Jane is trying to be especially nice to Mary just now, to make up for Helen's coldness. However, it must be said that so long as Helen was outwardly friendly to Mary, the latter paid very little attention to Jane. Do you think Jane should continue to be friendly with Mary, since she doesn't actively dislike her? Or is Helen right in calling Jane a hypocrite for being civil? Would it be dishonest of Helen to be friendly toward Mary when she doesn't like her?

• • • •

Incidentally, Mary can't understand why Helen doesn't talk to her and is very much hurt about it. I think she is very sensitive, in spite of the way she acts, and have come to the conclusion that she acts the way she does because she is really very shy. BYSTANDER.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR BYSTANDER: As I see this picture, Helen's dislike of Mary is based on jealousy rather than real disdain. Her fondness for Jane, on the other hand, is due to the fact that in the latter she has no rival for the spotlight. She accepts her, takes her in her stride, because she finds her pliant and susceptible to domination. If she actually saw Mary as a negligible person, she would not be at such pains to punish her by backing her completely off the stage; by trying to see that everyone in their immediate circle cold-shouldered her.

• • • •

Jane is being, in my opinion, something of a nincompoop in permitting Helen to form her judgments for her. She should rely upon her own intelligence and discernment in choosing her asociates; she should fashion her conduct in accordance with the dictates of her own conscience; and she should have the courage to defend her decisions against the propaganda attacks of individuals such as Helen, who have personal axes to grind. With you, I agree that Mary is a far more likable person than Helen, in that she is free from spite in her social dealings. Her personality is far more wholesome.

• • • •

I do not agree with Helen that one is playing the part of a hypocrite in showing civility to persons he knows, yet of whom he is not actively and positively fond. Rather, in showing such civility, one is proving one's right to be called a civilized human being. In withholding it, in showing the stiffened spine, the figuratively rising hair along the neck, one is reverting to a primitive, almost a savage, plane of conduct.

• • • •

I think Jane would be losing (rather than gaining) ground in the development of her social personality if she were to allow Helen to lead her by the nose through the mazes of friendship. I think the most intelligent thing she can do is continue to exercise her happy faculty of looking for, and finding, likable attributes in everyone she knows, Mary included. As Henry Thoreau says in his essay on Friendship: "We cannot have too many friends; the virtue which we appreciate we to some extent appropriate, so that thus we are made at last more fit for every relation in life. A base Friendship is of a narrowing and exclusive tendency, but a noble one is not exclusive; its very superfluity and dispersed love is the humanity which sweetens society . . ."

• • • •

"Let the Friend know," says Thoreau, "that those faults which he observes in his Friend his own faults attract. There is no rule more invariable than that we are paid for our suspicions by finding what we suspect . . . Perhaps there are none charitable, none disinterested, none wise, noble and heroic enough, for a true and lasting friendship." Here is a thought which Helen would do well to ponder. M. H.

New Casual Shoes Have Light Soles

FOLLOWING the current trend of fashion, walking shoes have not only gone feminine in styling but have just about reached the epitome of comfort. Those pictured above have the new single sole, which gives them great flexibility—producing an elastic-like movement to each footstep. The streamlined silhouette, plus the neat perforated pattern, side cut-out and strap, and high-riding front, give flattering lines to the feet. The built-up heel makes them equally adaptable to spectator and sports costumes. They are made of soft calfskin and come in the popular costume colors, including roseberry, Italian tan, navy, black, brown, white and combinations of white and color. A grand type of shoe for casual wear; of Tyrolean influence.

Any Lamb Recipe May Win a Prize In Post Contest

Does the thought of braised brown lamb cooked in a small amount of broth at a low simmering temperature start thoughts of gastronomic treats? Or a curry of lamb stew filled with green peas, carrots and celery bring ideas for end-of-the-month menus that might well be a guest dinner. Or a regal roast leg of lamb or crown roast, cooked without a cover to obtain a crisp brown coating, and basted only with the fat from the meat, tempt you to immediate action?

If so, then write down your favorite recipe using lamb and enter it in this week's Post recipe contest. Five cash prizes are being awarded. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Any recipe using lamb is eligible in the contest. The recipe may be for a new type of stuffing that adds flavor to the old dish or a recipe including a piquant sauce. Whatever your recipe is must be practical, savory and delicious tasting if it is to win.

Write out your recipe, include complete directions for preparation and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before April 9.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 5.

AS I'VE SAID often before, It's always interesting to look behind the man in the limelight and see the lady who very often operates it. At least she sees that he has his vitamins and his proper shuteye. In this case I've been studying Mrs. Paul Whiteman, wife of the large maestro who for 20 years has been famed in the world of modern music.

ALICE HUGHES

It was he who first brought jazz into the concert halls, and who made poor George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" the most talked-of music of its time.

Now Mrs. Whiteman was a great girl on her own at one time, and she needed no roly-poly band leader to crack the newspapers. As Margaret Livingston she was one of the leading movie vamps and gold-diggers of her era with a figure that set young men to dreaming. Her art reached a high point in an Edward G. Robinson film, when that gentle, art-collecting gunman gave her a resounding kick.

But Margaret Livingston, as such, is no more. She is now Mrs. Paul Whiteman exclusively, and as such handles his business affairs, which are far from picayune. In the past two decades he and his virtuosi have done a gross business of nearly $20,000,000—not alfalfa in any trade. At one time big boy grossed as much as $35,000 a week. She not only presides over the apartment in which Oom Paul lives like one of the better rajahs, but also keeps an eye on the big family of 30 people who make up his professional company. She knows their heart troubles, she's instantly aware of an ill baby in a musicker's family, and is in many ways the confidante and adviser of them all.

• • • •

Even so, Mrs. Whiteman is anything but a career woman in the usual sense. She does it neither for money nor glory. She feels it is a big part of her job as Paul's wife, and she performs it elegantly. She is not only an after-dinner wife, she is a daytime spouse, too. It's routine with her, that's all. And to think that once she was a well known, highly paid and widely admired movie actress. Well, as they say, it takes all kinds to make Hollywood. I think Margaret is one of the nicer kind.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt finally gave her uppity spring fashion opening at her shop, and it brought out the upper crust en masse, and very flaky it was, too. Even the mannequins were azure-blooded, and Miss Polly Busch chose and introduced the youngsters in the little numbahs created by Gloria and her twin sister Thelma, the Lady Furness that was, though she still employs the title. A great pair, those girls. It was Thelma, you remember, who introduced the Duchess of Windsor to her present husband, and both the twins speak somewhat foreign-like, as they were brought up abroad. And mighty darned few citizens remember that when she was a girl married to a Mr. Converse, Mr. D. W. Griffith had some idea of making a movie actress of her. I remember her appearing in one quaint old silent film, anyway.

• • • •

Did you ever hear of the fiendish way local firebugs, or "pyromaniacs," use to set fire to our crowded, flimsy old tenements? They set ablaze the baby buggy which is often parked under the wooden staircase on the first floor—then it's all over but the tragedy. But a few nights age two gallant fellows named Kelly and Mirris discovered the blazing go-cart in time, hauled it into the street, and probably saved the lives of several of the 40 sleeping families. Isn't it a peculiarly ghastly way to burn up things?

• • • •

Miss Leah Ray, who sings here and in Hollywood by way of the Old Dominion, has just been married at the traditional place, the Little Church Around the Corner, to David A. Werblin, a music publisher. Lovely Leah, when cornered, allowed that she was "very excited." No! . . . Princess Ethel Barrymore has been having the time of her life playing the stern old centenarian, Grandma Whiteoaks, in the "Jalna" of Mazo de la Roche. But when granny ups and dies, the play dies with her, so commanding is Miss Ethel, and perhaps by the time you read this the whole thing will be a very short paragraph in stage history.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Dietitians Advise Spending Third of Food Fund on Milk.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF EVERY FAMILY in the United States could adopt the food plan worked out for families on relief in New York City there would be no such thing as malnutrition in this country. The average family of five can be adequately nourished on $8.37 per week. As a rule, the families who follow this relief dietary are better fed than many a family with twice the allowance for food.

The home economics unit of the welfare department of New York City has done a marvelous job. Sue E. Sadow, superintendent of the unit, has worked out a diet based on the relief allowance for food that meets body requirements in every respect. This expert advice is invaluable to the housewife who wants to give her family the best diet for the money. This is the way the nutritionists would have you spend your food allowance:

2-6 for milk.
1-6 for bread and cereals.
1-6 for vegetables and fruit.
1-6 for meat, fish, eggs and cheese.
1-6 for fats, sugars, beverages and seasonings.

Market List Given.

Here is a suggested market list for one week for a family of five, at a total cost of $8.37 in New York City: Milk, 21 quarts (part of this may be in the form of evaporated milk); American cheese, ½ pound; 1 dozen eggs; 4 pounds of meat; 2 pounds of fish; 16 pounds of potatoes; 14 pounds other vegetables; 2 cans tomatoes; 1 pound legumes (beans, dried peas, lentils); 6 pounds of fruit (recommended 4 pounds fresh, 2 pounds dried); 21 pounds of bread and cereals (12 loaves of bread, ½ whole wheat and 6 pounds of cereals, preferably whole grain; 1 pound of macaroni or spaghetti, 2 pounds of flour (use more flour and less cereal if desired); fats and oils, 3 pounds, divided as follows: 1 pound butter, 1 pound peanut butter, ½ pound lard, ½ pint oil; sugar, 3 pounds; molasses, 1 can every two weeks; coffee, ½ pound; tea, ⅛ pound; cocoa, ¼ pound. For purposes of economy, purchases should be made on the pound basis.

The old American practice of marketing once a week was a sound one. We can all remember when most of the week's supplies were purchased on Saturday night. Running out and buying just enough food for the day is poor economy.

Menus Suggested.

Unlimited money for food is no assurance of a proper diet. A little knowledge of the nutritional needs of the body and a wise expenditure of the food allowance will buy greater protection for the health of your family. When the food budget is low, the tendency is to buy foods that are filling rather than foods that are nourishing.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Husband Out of Town.

SHE HAD BEEN putting everything off until his trip to Pittsburgh. "When Tom goes to Pittsburgh," she had told everybody, "I will have a lof of free time on my hands."

There were a million things she wanted to do about the house—especially in his clothes closet. And there were a lot of people she wanted to see . . . like Sally Gibble—Tom never could stand Herb—and Marjorie and Gladys whose only time off was Saturday afternoon, the same time Tom was free. And then she could really get to talk with her sister Jane about a lot of things . . . maybe they could stay nights with each other. And she wanted to get to the library and take out some of the new books . . . and she might go downtown to an afternoon movie and eat her dinner in a nice little tea room—she was so sick of the food she cooked herself—and then she had all that shopping to do—she could really get a lot done if she didn't have to race home to get dinner. Oh yes, she had promised to meet with her club committee . . . and to sew one afternoon for poor children . . . oh, there were so many things! Things that had been accumulating for months. Well, she would clean them up in one fell swoop.

• • • •

Tom left Thursday morning. He was driving and since he had to stop in Philadelphia he had decided to take his time and make a little vacation of it. The country was so pretty this time of year . . . and maybe he would look up old Bert Finch in Philadelphia . . . and Charlie Bunch in Pittsburgh. He hadn't seen them for ten years. Anyway, he would not be back until late Monday . . . maybe not until Tuesday.

"Sure you won't be lonely, honey?" he asked as he bade her good-by.

"I'll be all right, darling," she said. "I've got so MANY things to do."

Returning to the house she found its emptiness for a moment engulfing her. Then a flood of energy swept over her. There was so much to do!

• • • •

Thursday she was to clean, straighten, sort . . . get a lot of his stuff to the basement. He would never miss it if he didn't see it being moved. Thursday night she would spend with Sally Gibble—Herb was out of town—and Friday she would shop all day, meeting some of the girls for lunch. Then she and Jane would have dinner late and go to a movie—a light, funny one. Tom always wanted the historical plays.

Saturday she'd have Marjorie and Gladys and Jane for luncheon. They'd really have a good gossip—you could never really talk when a man was around. And Saturday she and Jane would get a snack out somewhere—one thing certain they wouldn't cook—and go to a concert or something, and—my how the time was being swallowed up! Oh well, there was Sunday and Monday and maybe Tuesday for all the loads of other things she had to do.

• • • •

Marjorie, Gladys and Jane came from work Saturday. It was the first time they had all been together in three years. Words, phrases, half finished sentences eagerly tripped over each other as the four of them lingered about the luncheon table. Gossip, permanent waves . . . whether to get lace or linen for summer . . . if nourishing creams really nourished . . . if the best way to hold a man was to be indifferent . . . whether Estelle would go through with her divorce . . . what had become of Grace . . . and Clyde . . . and Pete . . .

She looked at the clock. Three already! She was starting to suggest that they go into the living room when she heard the honk of a motor horn . . . The sound of a car turning in the drive. Who could it be? She ran to the window. It was Tom!

What on earth could be the matter? Was he sick? Hurt? Had something gone wrong? She rushed anxiously from the house.

He was alighting—tired, dusty, stiff, but triumphant. "Hello honey! Did I surprise you?" he asked as he kissed her. "I got everything finished up this morning. Saw a chance to get home before Sunday. Gosh I'm tired! Got anything to eat? I haven't had a bite since breakfast."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Treatment for Back Pain.

A MAN WHO is hanging a picture for his wife stoops over from the stepladder to pick up his hammer on the chair beside him. He experiences a sudden catch in the lower part of his back. The pain is excruciating. He straightens up and comes down from the ladder but finds he canont bend over without severe pain. He goes to a doctor, who finds nothing that shows on the X-ray. The trouble is probably a microscopic dislocation of one of the articular processes of the last vertebra or of the sacrum.

The best treatment is probably by manipulation.

The patient is put flat on his back on a solid table and asked to brace himself, holding on the sides. The doctor or operator stands at the foot of the table and with a firm grip around one of the ankles pushes the leg upward until it rests on the trunk. Then the patient is told to give a violent kick on command. As he kicks, the operator makes a sudden strong pull on the ankle. The direction of the force should be in the body line and at a slight angle of the horizontal plane. The kick and the pull should be timed so as to give a maximum force when the leg is fully extended.

This same procedure is done on the other leg and then on both together.

After two or three such kicks, the patient is again asked to sit up. If before the treatment he was able to sit up only 10 or 20 degrees, he should now be able to attain 40 to 50 degrees. Treatment is continued until only soreness remains in the lower part of the back. The average treatment required is five to ten kicks.

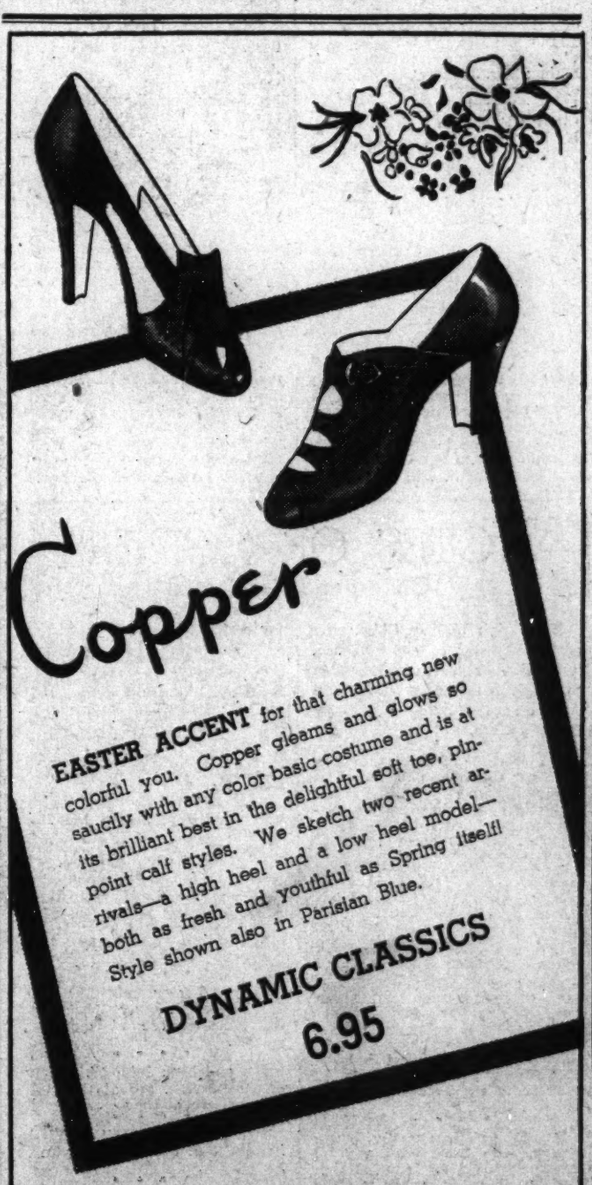
The kick and the pull cause a separation of the sacrum and the lower spine. At the same time there is a distinct forward thrust to the sacrum.

Brown-and-Blue Again Popular in Men's Wear

New York (AP).—Although it was taboo a few years ago, the brown-and-blue combination for men's shirts and suits or shirts and ties is going strong.

The ice was broken when a big shirt company advertised the combination in colors about 1930. (Combinations like that lose their original queer appearance when you see them around a lot.

The brown shirt with a blue suit is still a bad bet, however. Remember also that contrasting colors like that work best when both are in subdued tones.



EASTER ACCENT for that charming new colorful you. Copper gleams and glows so saucily with any color basic costume and is at its brilliant best in the delightful soft toe, pinpoint calf styles. We sketch two recent arrivals—a high heel and a low heel model—both as fresh and youthful as Spring itself! Style shown also in Parisian Blue.

Philadelphia Orchestra Brings Season to Close

Mrs. Roosevelt One of Many Musically Minded Notables Who Turn Out for Program Conducted by Eugene Ormandy.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Musical minded members of Washington society turned out in droves last night for the final Philadelphia Orchestra concert of the season. With Eugene Ormandy conducting and John Charles Thomas, famous American barytone, as soloist, the program moved smoothly along through numbers from Bach, Verdi and Beethoven and wound up with Ravel's "Bolero," to the delight of an audience heavily studded with official, diplomatic and residential notables.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Mrs. Roosevelt, coming on to the concert from a CCC dinner at which she read a letter from the President, was in her box before the first number. She wore a frock of pale blue lace chiffon. Accompanying her was Mrs. Malvina T. Scheider in a gown of pencil blue crepe beneath a black evening wrap.

Many persons glimpsed in the crowd at Constitution Hall appeared later at the reception given for Mr. Ormandy at the Raleigh Hotel, with Renoux J. Smith as host. Members of the Washington committee of the orchestra were asked to assist in receiving, and guests consisted of presidents of many musical and civic organizations, plus a sprinkling of social celebrities. John Charles Thomas, who was also invited to share honors with Mr. Ormandy at the reception did not appear; and Mrs. Ormandy, who had also been asked as an honor guest, did not accompany her husband to Washington because of illness in her family.

The concert itself drew one of the largest crowds attending a symphony program this season. While some of the seats in the first section were conspicuously vacant, the boxes were fairly well filled and the galleries were jammed.

Many Notables Glimpsed in Crowd

Miss Mabel Boardman, wearing a jade green satin frock beneath a fox cape, was in the box next to Mrs. Roosevelt. On down the line were several familiar faces, including those of Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who were in the box with Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss were glimpsed in the crowd; also, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, who has just returned from a sojourn in Florida; Miss Irene Boyle, Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovak Minister; the Yugoslav Minister's wife, Mme. Constantin Fotitch, in a handsome frock of changeable taffeta; Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, the latter gowned in white lace; Jouett Shouse—I didn't see his wife—and the Marquis of Sant'Orsola.

In Mrs. William A. Becker's box were Commander and Mrs. B. H. Lingo, she in a print evening gown, cut on simple lines, and Miss Anne Tuohy, in black velvet. Miss Laura Harlan was there, also Mrs. James J. Davis, who wore a black chiffon frock and was accompanied by her son, James J. Davis, jr. Sir Wilimott and Lady Lewis were in the audience; also Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gregor, the latter in garnet velvet; Olin Dows and many more.

Reception Given At Raleigh Hotel

The Queen Elizabeth room of the Raleigh Hotel was the scene of the reception and supper following the concert. In the receiving line, in addition to the host, Renoux J. Smith, were Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler, the latter gowned in moss-green velvet; Mrs. Andrew J. Snow, and Mr. Ormandy, who, despite his strenuous two hours preceding the party, engaged in animated with lengthy conversation with many of his "fans" who walked down the line.

Palms, ferns and pink phlox were used to decorate the room. The long table at one end was lighted with tall green candles in silver holders and centered with a pink and green basket of spun sugar.

The crowd lingered, revolving for the most part around the guest of honor, until well after midnight. Among the guests glimpsed there, in addition to many I have mentioned as being at the concert were Miss Katharine Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton; Miss Glenda Ray, of Darlington, Wis., the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Cook; Mrs. Foster Adams, who was gowned in white, and accompanied by Mrs. Eugene Byrnes.

The judges for this gala affair will be Manley W. Carter, Mrs. Frederick Van Lennep and A. W. Ward, and, of course, they will be due for 25 separate and distinct headaches when the time for awarding the blue ribbons comes around.

With Mrs. Louis Caldwell as hostess, covers were laid for 8. A low silver bowl, filled with white carnations and baby's breath centered the table and reminded the guests that the owner of the F Street Club, Mrs. Merriam Curtis was in New York to attend the wedding of her son, James F. Curtis, jr., and Miss Hope Gatins, which took place yesterday afternoon.

Among these in the luncheon party were Mrs. Ralph Church, wearing a trim, tailored gray suit with a navy blue hat and matching accessories; Mrs. Bruce Barton, in a black and beige ensemble; Mrs. George Ward, in one of the prettiest outfits seen this season—a gray twill suit with a turban to match, and corn-flower blue veil, buttoniere and gloves; Mrs. Royal McKenna, in a black crepe frock with broad-brimmed hat to match, and Mrs. Walter Distler, whose greyish-blue suit was set off with a navy sailor.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WITH EIGHT PIECES of camera luggage and a tripod, Marvin Breckinridge arrived in Washington yesterday to start giving lessons in amateur photography.

DUDLEY HARMON

The first meeting was held yesterday morning in the apartment of Mrs. David Karrick. Among those sitting around clutching pencil and paper earnestly were Mrs. Harry Hawes and her daughter, Mrs. Henderson Dunn; Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mrs. Brinkley Smthers, Mrs. Alexander Hawes, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, who was wearing a smart brown tweed outfied; Mrs. Alfred Hand and Margot Garrett.

* * * *

NOT CONTENT just to go about clicking camera shutters, the group yesterday resolved to study developing and enlarging as well. Mrs. Hawes and her daughter extended an invitation to their colleagues to come in any time and putter around their dark room.

Plans were made to go in for both indoor and outdoor work, and the studies were divided into several parts: portraits of adults (fairly easy); those of children (hard); gardens, interiors, buildings and candid camera shots. The lessons will be held twice weekly for four weeks, with Miss Breckenridge coming down from New York to give them.

* * * *

THE DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Breckinridge, she is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Walter White on this trip. Her favorite subject is travel-photography, and she has been very successful in selling her work recently to the magazines. Miss Breckinridge formerly resided in Washington, and has "done" a number of our citizens, including Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, the Lucius Wilmerding children and Miss Olivia Stokes. She is still in her twenties, and last year conducted similar classes here under the auspices of the Junior League.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY is about to lose, though only temporarily, three of its pillars. Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller are going to Europe and Miss Mabel Boardman will be California bound early next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are sailing on Saturday from New York on the Saturnia. They will return to Washington early in July. Miss Boardman is going out to the West Coast to attend the Red Cross convention.

* * * *

PROBABLY because they have been getting a lot of enthusiastic letters lately from Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson plan to go there within the next three or four weeks to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons. The latter was before her marriage Caroline Thompson.

The Simmons write that they adore Canada, and that it is even gayer than Washington. Parliament is still in session, there's a dinner every night, and since Mr. Simmons is Charge d'Affaires of the legation, he has to do all the dining out which a Minister would have to do, as well as his own.

Nearly every week-end Mr. and Mrs. Simmons have gone skiing. Anita Grew English, daughter of Ambassador Joseph Grew and wife of an American foreign service officer at the Ottawa legation, has a cottage in the mountains nearby and takes a party up every week. Mrs. English and Mrs. Simmons were once schoolmates.

ELSA MAXWELL is reported to be brooding over plans for another party. This one will be a gala ball in New York tentatively set for May 4. Elsa is fond of the rustic touch, and will feature a Maypole dance at the affair . . . Frau Herbert Blankenhorn, of the German Embassy, hopes to get away later in the spring to spend the summer in Germany . . . Mme. Charles Lucet expects to vacation in France.

First Lady Honored by The 73d Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Roosevelt, speaking as guest of honor at the luncheon of the Seventy-third Club yesterday, urged wives of members of Congress to "see for themselves" conditions needing correction in the Capital and to "do something about it," using Freedmen's Hospital as an example of public institutions about which citizens do not take the trouble to inform themselves.

Yesterday's luncheon, held at the Shoreham, marked the fifth year that the Seventy-third Club has entertained the First Lady. She pointed out that Freedmen's Hospital has insufficient appropriations to be efficient either as as a training center for physicians and nurses or in caring for patients. She did not criticize members of the appropriations committee for not having visited the institution to acquaint themselves with its needs but she implied that wives of members of Congress might be helpful by doing a little personal investigating which the men had not time to carry on themselves.

She was approached some time ago by a group of colored nurses in Harlem, she said, who told her they could not qualify under the New York law as registered nurses after being graduated from Freedmen's Hospital. The institution is conducted under the Department of the Interior in connection with Howard University, she explained, and colored nurses and medical students are trained there.

First Lady Does Thorough Investigating

Desirous of finding out why graduates were not qualified to practice in New York, she visited the hospital, accompanied by Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., of the Public Health Service.

She learned the hospital had no radium, an X-ray machine so old the physician in charge of it was afraid of burning the patients; an operating room and two wards which leaked when it rained; only one children's ward, although there are more than enough patients for two. With tuberculosis a serious problem among colored people, there was no provision for training students in the care of this disease.

"Why don't we know about such things?" she asked. "If we would just stop a minute to add up the cost to us we would find the cost of prevention was much less in the long run. What affects any group of people in a community is not confined to them, but touches the rest of the population. We women who are interested in real economy should study such things."

The same is true of crime conditions, said Mrs. Roosevelt. She urged the study of places where effective crime prevention programs were being carried out and cited Los Angeles County as one of these. There young offenders are never put in institutions when it can be avoided, but are put in custody of individuals who, through personal interest and training, are in many instances successful in steering them into lives of usefulness. She stressed the value of personal contact both to the citizen giving it and to the one he is trying to help.

Mrs. Richard Duncan Presides at Luncheon

Mrs. Richard Duncan, president of the club, introduced Mrs. Roosevelt. Preceding her talk, Miss Gertrude Borzi, of New York, a former Washington girl, sang a group of solos. She was accompanied at the piano by Milton Boyce. Next month Miss Borzi leaves for a European concert tour, accompanied by Mme. Gianinni, of whom she is a protege.

Bouquets of Easter lilies and Japanese iris decorated the head table and the smaller ones at which members of the club and guests were seated. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a gown of Eleanor blue, with a hat of the same shade trimmed with a tip of sable. There were bands of sable just below the elbows of her sleeves and she wore a short sable cape. Mrs. Duncan's frock was of ashes of roses and her black-brimmed hat was edged with the same shade and trimmed in a little bouquet of matching clovers.

Others at the head table were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who wore a dress of loganberry shade with a navy blue coat, hat and accessories; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, in blue, with an amaryllis corsage of wine red; Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, wife of Senator Lundeen, in a costume of black and yellow; Mrs. Fred Biermann, chairman of the committee for the luncheon, wearing a costume of black and white, with a corsage of woods violets on her fox scarf; Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army, in a black suit, and Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the Congressional Club, in a print dress in tones of brown.

Mrs. David Lynn, wife of the architect of the Capitol, also was at the head table, as were other members of the committee in addition to Mrs. Biermann. They were Mrs. Martin Smith, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. John M. O'Connell, of Rhode Island; Mrs. Dow Harter, Mrs. Brooks Fletcher, Mrs. Donald H. McLean, Mrs. Monrad Wallgren, Mrs. Michael Reilly and Mrs. Abe Burdock.

MRS. MARY STEELE, director of the Women's Division of the District of Columbia WPA, has sent out announcements to Washington women, telling them of the 43 trained women in the sewing project of the WPA, available for making and altering women's and children's clothes. She adds that they can alter and make slip covers, curtains and draperies—all things which come along to be done in the spring.

The private employment of these women in the District will reduce the relief load and help put to practical account the training these women have been given. They are to receive $2.80 for an eight-hour day or 35 cents an hour and suspended from the WPA while doing private work, her letter explains. Miss Gertrude Van Hoesen, at the old Metropolitan Church, John Marshall place and C street, is in charge of assigning them to persons from whom requests come.

Those who prefer to take their alteration work to the church rooms, rather than having a seamstress come to them may do so, Mrs. Steele adds.

The co-operation of club women and others in the city has been enlisted by several of the projects under Mrs. Steele's direction. Another in which there is much interest is the training course for household workers in which a committee headed by Mrs. Loren Johnson is co-operating with the WPA.

DR. JOHN F. LATIMER, of George Washington University classics department, will present an illustrated lecture, "Camera Notes on Ancient History," tonight at a closed meeting of Circolo Di Cultura Italiana, at the Washington International House, 1708 New Hampshire avenue. The pictures, of historic sites in Italy and Sicily, were taken by Dr. Latimer and Col. Donald Armstrong last summer, while they were attending the Summer Classical School in Naples.

Dr. Latimer, incidentally, will direct the school this summer. He is a native of Mississippi, attended Mississippi College, where he was chiefly interested in dramatics and languages and majored in Greek and Latin, receiving his master's degree at the University of Chicago and his doctor's at Yale.

THE ENTHUSIASTIC response to the Lenten series of lectures by Mrs. O. W. McNeese, historian and lecturer, at the Woman's National Democratic Club, has been such that the club has decided to inaugurate a new series which will be open to the public which may subscribe to the series or attend the separate lectures.

The new series, which will begin at the clubhouse Friday morning at 11 o'clock, will feature nineteenth century personalities who nearly became Presidents of the United States. Mrs. McNeese is described as "a brilliant historian who in an extraordinary degree brings alive for her audience the characters she discusses." She has just concluded five weekly talks on Presidents and their ladies of the nineteenth century.

The Friday morning lecture, which inaugurates the new series of four lectures, will deal with five presidential aspirants whose views, actions and personalities do so much to make glamorous the early days when America was making history—Hamilton, Burr, Webster, Clay and Calhoun. Each subsequent Friday during April other characters will be portrayed.

The buffet luncheon immediately following the lecture will be available to all those making reservations before 11 o'clock.

Spain's Friends To Hold Dance

A dance, sponsored jointly by the Women's Committee of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy and the Central Committee for Spanish Relief, will be given Sunday, April 17, in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. The dance will mark the seventh anniversary of the founding of the Spanish republic.

Guests of honor will be the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios. Among the sponsors are Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Representative and Mrs. John T. Bernard, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., Marquis Childs, Miss Peggy Duffy, Miss Evelyn Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gorman, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Dr. and Mrs. Isadore Lattman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mackenzie, Representative O'Connell and Mr. and Mrs. David Saposs.

Funds from the dance will go for a milk fund for children of loyalist Spain. At this time the most necessary help that can be given to helpless noncombatant victims of bombings in Barcelona is food, particularly milk. This is a necessity which has not been available in any adequate quantity there.

This is but one of a series of events given by the Women's Committee of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy to help victims of the warfare. A series of concerts were held in March which will provide food and shelter for 25 children in the Thomas Jefferson Home, near Valencia, for the next six months. Teas were held at the homes of prominent Washingtonians after urgent calls were made for food, medical supplies and other necessities.

Lisner Leaves $2,225,000 to G.W. and Home

Auditorium for University, Aid for Aged Women Listed in Will.

Donating $750,000 to George Washington University for an auditorium and $1,500,000 for a home for indigent aged Washington women, the will of Abram Lisner, late merchant prince and civic leader and philanthropist, filed in District Court yesterday, disclosed he left an estate of $3,500,000.

The document asked that the university be given $1,000,000 less gifts made after drafting of the will. It was understood that $250,000 had been given for a library recently, and that amount would be deducted from the total grant.

The will instructed that the building shall be known as "Lisner Auditorium," and preferably shall be of marble. Its terms provide that if the necessary site is not now owned by the school, an appropriate location may be purchased.

Kin to Get $300,000.

Concerning the benefaction, President Marvin, of George Washington, said: "Mr. Lisner's gift leaves all associated with George Washington University with a deep sense of gratitude and of responsibility. It is our high resolve that this gift, in our keeping, shall be so ordered as to benefit to the fullest possible extent the academic community and the community of Washington, thus carrying into fulfillment Mr. Lisner's great dream."

Mr. Lisner placed in a special fund the $1,500,000 gift for a home for aged and indigent white women, natives of the city.

Trustees of the fund, George W. White, Cloyd Heck Marvin and Leon Tobriner, were allowed wide discretion as to where the building should be erected and other details. It was specifically set forth that admittance should not be governed by religious beliefs.

Mr. Lisner, who died March 26, left substantial bequests to nephews and nieces. A special fund of $300,000 was ear-marked for the following gifts: $30,000 to Sidney Lisner and Gertrude Luchs, children of a brother, David Lisner; $30,000 to Lillie Toplitt, Clarence Lisner and Hortense Herbert, children of a deceased brother, George Lisner. The sum of $30,000 to be divided equally between the children of a deceased niece, Selma Brill, daughter of a deceased brother, George Lisner; $30,000 to the children of a deceased nephew, Selig Lisner, son of George Lisner, the money to be equally divided; $30,000 to Saul Ganz and Millie Toplitz, children of a deceased sister, Rosalie Ganz. $30,000 to be equally divided between the children of Fannie Blout, deceased daughter of a deceased sister, Zerlina Lowenberg. It was specified that taxes due on the awards should be paid by the estate so that the entire grants will go to the heirs.

Hospitals to Get Shares.

Also $5,000 was given Horace Key, chauffeur; $10,000 to the Hebrew Home for the Aged, Inc., and $10,000 each to Children's and Emergency Hospitals.

Mr. Lisner, for many years owner of the Palais Royal department store, lived at 1723 Massachusetts avenue northwest. He was 82 years old. His wife died several years ago. The law firm of Tobriner, Graham, Brez & Tobriner represents the estate.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in its last Washington concert of the season Tuesday night in Constitution Hall, with John Charles Thomas as soloist. Program: Toccata and Fugue in C major (Bach), Recitative and Aria, "Eri tu che macchiavi" from "Un Ballo in Maschera" (Verdi), Symphony No. 7 in A major (Beethoven), "Eros" (Grieg), "Phydile" (Duparc), Recitative and Aria, "Salome," from "Herodiade" (Massenet), "Bolero" (Ravel).

With John Charles Thomas fea- who prefer familiar music, it would viously designed to please those and woodwinds can produce exact- have been strange if last evening's large audience in Constitution Hall had not responded enthusiastically to the Philadelphia Orchestra's last concert of the season. The fervent applause, plenteous and prolonged at every interval, testified to an enjoyment derived from the playing of the splendid instrumental body, the artistic singing of the barytone and the competency of the conductor, Eugene Ormandy.

Although we are offered too many transcriptions these days, while hundreds of orchestral works remain unperformed, it must be conceded that Leo Weiner's arrangement of Bach's great organ toccata and fugue in C major is excellent. The registration has been faithfully followed, and the structure of the music clearly displayed with a minimum of exaggeration in tonal coloring. Despite the massiveness of the proportions and the brilliance of the effects, however, the belief lingers that Bach's organ music should be heard only from the instrument for which it was composed with the skill of a master organist. No transformations through strings and woodwinds can producee exactly the same impression.

Mr. Thomas, resonant of voice and dramatic in demeanor, made two appearances on the platform before and after the intermission. His first contribution was a stirring delivery of Reinhart's denunciatory aria, "Eri to che macchiavi," from Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera." At his return he presented two contrasting lyrics, Grieg's "Eros" and Duparc's "Phydile," and Herod's aria, "Salome," from Massenet's "Herodiade." Both the arias were preceded by their introductory recitatives, and were sung with emotional conviction.

Beethoven's seventh symphony received a performance admirable for its verve and its clarity of phrasing. It would have been better if the audience could have departed with this deathless music still fresh in their minds unperturbed by less significant sounds, but the concert closed with Ravel's "Bolero," which has become merely tiresome now that its clever tricks have all been discovered.

One regrets that Eugene Ormandy did not note the fact the National Symphony Orchestra had already played Beethoven's seventh this season. Enjoyable as his reading was, one would have preferred in its stead and in place of Ravel's tour de force in rhythm, two unfamiliar works which the Philadelphia Orchestra played last Saturday night in its home city: Mozart's Divertimento No. 10 in F major and Schubert's third symphony in D major. There are auditors here, as well as elsewhere, who are satiated with repetitions of standard works, and who would appreciate the recognition of their musical intelligence.

Mrs. Parsons Expires at 96 At Pasadena

Mrs. Mary A. Parsons, who as a young bride lived in Washington 72 years ago, died Monday at her home in Pasadena, Calif., at the age of 96.

A friend of Susan B. Anthony and Jane Addams, Mrs. Parsons was the widow of Capt. E. Howard Parsons, veteran of the Civil and Spanish-American wars, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer Rebellion.

Capt. Parsons, who during the Civil War was a lieutenant on Gen. Logan's staff and accompanied Sherman on his march to the sea, was stationed in Washington with his bride for a year shortly after their marriage in September, 1865.

Capt. and Mrs. Parsons returned to Washington in 1898. Residing here until 1906, Mrs. Parsons was prominent in social and philanthropic activities and was a member of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. She was also identified with the D. A. R.

At the age of 16, Mrs. Parsons was governess to Benjamin Harrison, who was to be elected President. In later days, Mrs. Parsons became an ardent suffragist and supporter of Miss Anthony.

Mrs. Parsons is survived by four daughters, Mrs. J. F. Millspaugh, of Pasadena; Mrs. J. F. Cleve, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Harry L. Hubbard, of Akron, and Mrs. Walter P. Keene, of Washington; a son, Maurice G. Parsons, of Nashville, Tenn.; eight grandchildren, including Mrs. Carl I. Wheat, of Washington, and two great-grandsons, Francis and Richard Wheat, of Washington.

She will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Leopold McLaglen Ordered to Leave U. S. for 5 Years

Los Angeles, April 5 (AP).—Superior Judge Thomas Ambrose decreed today that Capt. Leopold McLaglen, brother of Victor McLaglen, must leave the United States for five years to escape serving a prison sentence in an extortion case.

The former British army officer, who became a Hollywood physical education instructor, was convicted of trying to extort $20,000 from his former employer, Phillip Chancellor.

Judge Ambrose first sentenced McLaglen to serve one to five years in prison, then suspended the sentence and granted five years probation, with one year in jail. Probation officers reported they could place him aboard a ship leaving April 26 for Liverpool.

French Prepare To House 100,000 Spanish Refugees

Perpignan, France, April 5 (AP).—French frontier officials prepared today for a possible migration of from 10,000 to 100,000 Catalonians into France from Spain's civil war.

French troops were understood to be ready to reinforce mobile guardsmen patroling the border, maintaining order and directing the refugees to the interior of France or to insurgent Spain.

The first exodus ended after 7,612 —of whom 5,466 were Spanish government militiamen—plodded across snowy mountains to Gagneres de Luchon last week.

Insurgents Take Gun That Set Off Franco's Revolt

Zaragoza, April 5 (AP).—A prisoner whom insurgents captured at Morella, today surrendered a revolver which he said was used to assassinate Jose Calvo Sotelo, the rightist, whose death in Madrid July 13, 1936, was a major incident precipitating the Spanish civil war. The weapon was presented to Gen. Franco.

★★★★X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1938 17

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

A case of acute modesty: In the new Washington city directory, Ben Cohen, ace brain truster, is listed as a clerk—merely "clk" . . . In the official red book he's a general counsel under PWA . . . No mock modesty for Tommy Corcoran, his room-mate: he's listed as "special counsel, RFC."

Sergt. Ed Brown . . . Garner's guard.

. . . Germans in Washington have been making colossal jokes privately about Herr Hitler's romantic dreams for sometime . . . But it's really no laughing matter.

At his first press conference after the historic I-don't-want-to-be-a-dictator letter, President Roosevelt appeared in extraordinarily good spirits, as he always is during or after a melee or a stubbed toe.

He was brandishing a fancy dagger, gift from the Sultan of Muscat.

He told the White House reporters that he could pin it on the wall at 30 paces.

"What we want to know," piped up someone, "is how far you can throw it down Pennsylvania avenue."

That's the direction of Congress.

Few visitors to Washington fully appreciate the true majesty of Government until they see Officer Brown, the 7-foot, 300-pound gendarme assigned at the Capitol to keep brain-trusters from bothering Vice President Garner.

"—lair of the celebrities."

Just as the Savoy bar is London headquarters for the gayer master-minds, and as the Metropole and National are the Moscow rendezvous for a shot of vodka before a purge, so is the Mayflower cocktail lounge the place where Washington nectar is tilted by the white-haired lads of the More Abundant Life.

Visiting politicos on their frequent pilgrimages to Mecca foregather there, because Jim Farley and many another vizier live upstairs. Tourists drop in for a glimpse of a few Senators, and Senators come in on the forelorn hope that Jimmy Roosevelt may be around . . . There's a legend that he drops in occasionally but I can't confirm it.

So obliging Washingtonians point out real or imaginary celebrities to their cousins from Omaha and Denver . . . Meanwhile, young attaches and debs and people dance or munch popcorn and potato chips, and young clerks from the departments point each other out as Tommy Corcoran, who is more apt to be off revising somebody's speech at the cocktail hour.

* * *

Since realism is the new fad around the Capital, people too tough to worry about the stock market are doing a little informal worrying about the possibility that Washington might be bombed in the next war . . .

The last German flight from a ship in an English port to Brazil adds just enough realism to the notion to rescue it from the realm of make-believe.

European raiders needn't fly back to Europe, either; they might drop their eggs and fly right on to a haven in Central America . . . Consoling thought: Planes can fly both directions.

"—sport behind the White House."

Cyclists are scorching around the Tidal Basin, horsemen and horsewomen trotting through the machine age, and proletarian baseballers heaving that old pill from base to base.

By 6 a. m. the tennis players and golfers begin to mobilize on the courts and links of Potomac Park; the President can see them from his bedroom windows . . .

Fishermen line the water along Hains Point, their backs to the double cherry blossoms, sailboats slant across the harbor, and a Daniel Boone could pot a couple of tourists at the tourist camp before breakfast, from a blind atop the Monument, with his squirrel gun; the open season has begun.

CAPITAL CAPRICES: Deficit finance has infected Washington retail trade at last; a merchant advertises a movie camera, $9.95; projector, $14.95; or "both for $27.45" . . . The janitor at the Polish Embassy has claimed diplomatic immunity—to the speed laws, not to measles . . . Nazi jest: "Schuschnigg gave up Austria for Lent."

House to Pass Income Levy, Says Nichols

By James D. Secrest.

Restoration of the beer tax of 75 cents a barrel to the District revenue bill and approval of the graduated income levy by the House District Committee today and the House next Monday were forecast yesterday by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, after an executive committee session on the sub-committee report.

While the committee was considering the revenue bill, designed to balance the District's budget for the next fiscal year, President Roosevelt signed the local supply bill carrying $47,255,155 in appropriations and authorizing a test of parking meters and an investigation of the District relief needs and expenditures.

The House District Committee struck out the beer tax on a 5-to-4 vote upon motion of Chairman Palmisano after it had ejected a group of leading Washington citizens who had been promised a 30-minute hearing.

One delegation had appeared to argue for substitution of a modified business privilege tax for the income levy, while spokesmen for the citizens' committee on fair taxation were prepared to defend the latter.

Included in the delegation which was turned away without a hearing were Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Edgar Morris, chairman of the Board of Trade municipal finance committee; James E. Colliflower, past president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Roger J. Whiteford, general counsel of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; John Saul, president of the B. F. Saul Co.; Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association; Fred A. Smith, vice president of the Washington Real Estate Board, and Julian Brylawski, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners and Operators Association.

"We would like to state," they said in a statement left with the committee clerk, "that as between the proposed income tax and a modified business privilege tax, we are unanimously in favor of the latter."

After a statistical analysis of District revenue and authorized expenditures for the next fiscal year, the committee of businessmen asserted that a $1.75 realty rate, a 75-cent beer tax and a 25-cent increase in the liquor tax would raise sufficient revenue.

$342,480 Allotted To Improve Potomac

The long sought improvement of the Potomac River waterfront was assured yesterday with the approval by Secretary Woodring of an allotment of $342,480.

Maj. Walter D. Luplow, Army engineer who will direct the development, said last night he expected to begin operations during the week.

The funds just provided, which include a $69,000 contribution by the District government, are expected to permit the construction of the eastern "halves" of two yacht basins, clearing away of old buildings, preparation of bulkhead walls, berthing and service piers, and a service building.

Chest Evades Stand on GHA, Hospital Row

Official Statement Fails to Indicate Position on Refund Petition.

The executive committee of the Community Chest yesterday issued its first formal statement on its position in the Group Health Association-District Medical Society fight, but the 700-word announcement did not settle anything.

Relationship of the nine member hospitals, which bar their facilities to GHA doctors, to the Community Chest was described, but the executive committee refrained from going beyond an exposition of the facts.

Scores of Federal employes last week sent Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director, a petition canceling pledges and demanding refunds of money already subscribed in protest against the hospitals' exclusion of GHA doctors. The executive committee did not divulge what action will be taken on the petition.

Jurisdiction Denied.

The official statement pointed out that the hospitals, along with 55 other member agencies, are admitted into the Chest for one-year periods, renewable each fall. Whereas the 55 receive fixed appropriations, however, the hospitals are paid by the patient, it was pointed out: $4 a day for resident care and 50 cents per clinic visit.

"The Community Chest approves the character and scope of the services to be rendered by all member agencies and also the financial operations of the 55 budgeted agencies," the committee explained.

"But it does not assume any jurisdiction over the administrative policies of any agency, those policies being under the jurisdiction of competent volunteer boards of directors, who serve without pay."

Chest Funds Short.

Last year the Community Chest had funds sufficient to pay for only 71 per cent of services given to its clients by member hospitals, the statement said. That is, $392,332 worth of clinic and in-patient service was certified by the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals, for which the Chest had funds to pay only $281,594.

"It is clear," the statement continued, "that all monies paid by the Community Chest to the hospitals is for the benefit of individuals and families who need hospital and clinic services and (2) hospital services can be paid for only in proportion as pledges to the Chest are made and paid . . .

"Any reduction in the pledge funds means a definite curtailment in the services of all member agencies and a consequent loss of those services by the people who need them."

U. S. Bureau Heads Will Face Inquiry

Bureau chiefs against whom complaints of discrimination have been made by civil service workers will be summoned before a special Senate committee, Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, the chairman, stated yesterday.

Following appointment of five Senators to conduct the inquiry authorized in the Ellender resolution, the Louisiana Senator conferred with his colleagues and obtained approval of his proposal to gather considerable data before the inquiry by personal investigation.

Other members of the committee are Senators Logan (Democrat), Kentucky; Johnson (Democrat), Colorado; Austin (Republican), Vermont, and Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

Junior Board Of Commerce Holds Dinner

Huge Firms Must Serve America, 5th Annual Banquet Told.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, last night declared the challenge to the men of today is "to make corporations serve the purpose of democracy in America."

Senator O'Mahoney, speaking at the fifth annual banquet of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce, declared that the present crisis would not be solved until the people, through the Federal Government, are able to control the contracts upon which the corporations are founded.

He called for support for the bill, which he is sponsoring with Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, to provide Federal licensing of corporations. The bill is before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Corporations Like Gunmen.

He described the rise of the corporation over the individual in commerce as the same kind of change by which "the man with a gun pushed the knight in armor behind the curtains of history."

"We don't need to be angry at the men who dominate the corporations. We must recognize the fact that the corporation is here to stay as an instrumentality of modern life," he said.

He charged that private monopoly under the old regime, and public monopoly under the new regime, had alike sought to restrain production in order to maintain profits.

Given Diamond Key.

An earlier speaker, Judge Edward M. Curran, of the District Police Court, described the opportunities of modern America as "greater than those of our forefathers."

Judge Curran was presented a diamond-studded key for distinguished service to the community, the first award of its kind in Washington.

Bernard Nees received a golf trophy for work in securing new members, while the chairman of the winning membership team, Wilson Kilgore, was presented at the dinner. His team will be given a dinner by other competing teams.

Guests Introduced.

Among guests presented during the dinner were the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University; Ambrose O'Connell, executive assistant to the Postmaster General; representatives of the Board of Trade, including Edgar Morris, past president; Francis G. Addison, jr., and Lawrence E. Williams, vice presidents; Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary; James E. Colliflower, secretary; John Riseling, city editor of The Washington Post; Arthur A. de Titta, Movietone News, and William B. Dolph, Mutual Broadcasting Co.

John S. Bleecker, retiring president of the board, outlined its activities during the past year. New officers installed last night were Lyle F. O'Rourke, president; Minor Hudson and Charles L. Carr, vice presidents; Stanley Pearson, secretary; Henry Gichner, treasurer, and Philip F. Herrick, general counsel. Arthur H. Clephane presided.

Hazen's Painter Gets 15-Day Jail Sentence

A painting job on District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's home, 1829 Sixteenth street northwest, came to a temporary standstill yesterday while the painter was being tried in Police Court on a drunk charge.

Commissioner Hazen will have to look for a painter now, because Burke was sentenced to serve 15 days in jail.

Rare Treasures Enrich Cathedral This Easter

Post Staff Photos.

Canterbury Pulpit in Use Here at Easter

The celebrated Canterbury Ambon, or great pulpit, made of historic stones of Canterbury Cathedral, in England, will be used by Bishop James E. Freeman for the first time when he delivers his Easter Sunday sermon at Washington Cathedral.

Workmen yesterday were busy beneath the dome of the cathedral assembling the spiritual and historic masterpiece, the rare parts of which have been in a vault awaiting the completion of other furnishings for the Choir and Crossing of the cathedral.

At the time the bishop steps into the pulpit for his sermon, the new great organ of the cathedral will be used. The "heart" of the organ will be the new console, which will enable the organist, Robert George Barrow, to weave his musical tapestry by means of 125 stops and approximately 10,000 pipes.

The stones from Canterbury were sculptured under the direction of W. Douglas Caroe, resident architect there.

It was presented 36 years ago by the archbishop and dean of the Chapter of Canterbury in memory of Stephen Langton, who led the barons of Great Britain when the Magma Charta was granted by King John.

On the left is the Venerable Bede giving one of his pupils the final chapter of his Anglo-Saxon translation of St. John. The martyrdom of William Tyndale, burned at the stake October 6, 1538, printing an English version of the Bible, is at the right.

Stone likenesses of King Alfred, who, in 871, translated the Psalms into Anglo-Saxon, and John Wycliffe, rector of Lutterworth, who was tried in 1378 for issuing an English Bible, complete the work.

'Many Years' Wished CCC By Roosevelt

In the Civilian Conservation Corps the Nation has an organization that conserves and develops natural resources while also giving unemployed boys the training and health which will fit them for private employment, President Roosevelt said last night.

"This should be a source of gratification to the country," he said in a letter to Director Robert Fechner read at the fifth birthday banquet of the agency by Mrs. Roosevelt.

First Lady Joins Praise.

"It is my earnest hope," the President continued, "that the Corps may continue its fine work for many years to come."

Mrs. Roosevelt declared that in her travels throughout the country she found communities appreciative of CCC work for two reasons—the good it has done the enrollees and the practical work projects it has given to the various areas.

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, who introduced the bill which "restored" 300 camps facing abandonment and secured an increase of $50,000,000 in the CCC appropriation, termed the agency a "typical Rooseveltian idea."

500 Attend Banquet.

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, said she hoped that "we of the Congress may someday have the pleasure of making this a permanent corps."

Five hundred persons, mostly CCC office employes and their guests, attended the banquet which ended a week of celebration in CCC camps throughout the Nation.

Persons, Fechner Speak.

Charles H. Taylor served as chairman. Other speakers were Frank W. Persons, of the CCC Advisory Council, and Director Fechner. Persons traced growth of the organization. Fechner replied to greetings extended by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Nats to Send Two Lineups Against League Pitchers

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1938 X*

This Morning

Monte Weaver Likely to Pitch Opener.

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., April 5.

On April 18, after Frank Roosevelt, the old Groton right-hander, starts and finishes his season's pitching on the same delivery and then goes back on baseball's voluntarily retired list for another year, Bucky Harris will send a hurler of his own choice to the mound for the opening game.

POVICH.

And if the fellow who takes the mound for the Nats that day is a tall, bony chap, with an adam's apple best described as prominent and long, loose wrists dangling from his sleeves—a veritable Ichabod Crane of baseball—then the saga of Monte Weaver will embrace another notable chapter.

For Weaver has been the stepchild of the Washington pitching staff for three seasons—more tolerated than esteemed. The suggestion, a month ago, that Monte would be Harris' opening-game selection, would have been laughed off. Weaver is a nice sort of fellow, a hard worker, and good to his folks. But pitch the opening game? Please be serious. Wes Ferrell is a cinch for the assignment. It might go to Jimmy DeShong. But Weaver? Are you crazy? . . .

But that was last month. At this writing, it may be Weaver, indeed, who strides out there to take the resin bag in his hand on April 18. That prediction is not at all far-fetched. The fact is that the angular fellow is the best pitcher on the Washington staff as we go to press.

Ferrell Just So-So.

Wes Ferrell has been just so-so in the spring exhibition games. DeShong has taken a series of terrific beatings. Harris' rookie crop has not yet proved itself. But Weaver—ah, he has given the Nats' manager something to contemplate. In his every start Monte has pitched brilliantly.

Weaver this season has his health. His pitching always varied in direct proportion to his weight, and Weaver today is a 170-pounder, heavier than he ever was since he won 22 games for the Nats in 1932. At 146 pounds in 1934 he was a rank failure. At the same weight in 1935, he couldn't win. In 1936, still underweight, he was sent back to the minors. Last year he began to hold his weight and won 12 games for the Nats.

The fellow knows how to pitch—that's certain. When he came up to the Nats in 1931 from the Baltimore Orioles, who sold his contract for $25,000, Weaver was a finished pitcher. He needed no coaching. He knew how to throw the ball and where to throw it. And he had a hop on his fast one. In his first full season he leaped into that small company of pitchers who could win 20 games as a freshman.

But in recent seasons Monte has not been a consistent winner. It was only on the chance that he could stage a comeback that Weaver was retained by the Nats. If his inclusion in any trade would swing a profitable deal for the Nats, the Washington bosses would not have hesitated to toss him in . . . he has long been labeled "trading material." Harris was beginning to despair of Monte.

Will Not Hesitate.

In his favor, however, was the fact, always, that he knows how to pitch. When he lost it was not because he made mistakes—rookie-like—out there on the mound. He simply did not have his prime asset, his fast ball. Bill Terry, of the Giants, corroborates the evidence that Weaver is a smart pitcher. Terry has always maintained that the best pitching his Giants faced in the 1933 world series was not again Earl Whitehill, who shut the Giants out in the third game, but against Monte Weaver, who was beaten, 2-1, in the fourth game.

Bucky Harris finds himself on something of a spot as the opening game approaches. He is aware that the opening game assignment in Washington is peculiarly an honor to the pitcher he selects. In other cities the opener may be just another ball game, but at Griffith Stadium, in the presence of President Roosevelt and high dignitaries, the pitching assignment is something eagerly sought and cherished by the Nats' hurlers.

Harris had hoped that Wes Ferrell would earn the opening game job. The temperamental right hander, as the ranking pitcher on the staff last year, has an equity in the assignment, Harris feels. So does Jimmy DeShong, the work horse of Washington pitching staffs for the past three seasons. But Harris is in no mood to give either the job simply to satisfy their vanity. He will not hesitate to choose Monte Weaver if Weaver appears to be the fellow most likely to succeed on April 18. And at this writing that is the indication.

For years Washington managers were never plagued by their opening game choice. As long as Walter Johnson was on the club—for 20 years—the honor belonged to Johnson. In later years Earl Whitehill, as the dean of the staff, always anticipated the assignment, always got it. When Whitehill left the Nats Buck Newsom inherited the job for a year.

Last year Harris' failure to nominate Newsom for the inaugural game marked the decline of big Newsom's value to the Nats. He grumbled and pouted at the preference given to Joe Cascarella on opening day and never quite got over the affront. In mid-season he was traded.

But there will be few to begrudge Monte Weaver the job, if it is, indeed, Weaver who gets it. Battered by circumstances and fighting everlastingly to offset the frailties of his physique, Monte Weaver, if he is out there on April 18, will be the man who came back. That sort of thing always deserves a hand.

Favorites Win At Pinehurst

Defending Titlist Among First Round Victors.

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 5.—Favorites all along the line scored victories today in first-round matches of the North and South amateur golf tournament.

Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., defending titlist, and George T. Dunlaps, jr., of Pinehurst, a pre-tourney favorite, won handily, but Frank Strafaci, of New York, medalist; Pat Mucci, of Brooklyn, and Robert Knowles, of Boston, Mass., found the going tougher.

Dunkelberger defeated William Cozart, of Durham, N. C., 6 and 4. Dunlap won by the same score from Dr. Otto Tomic, of Trenton, N. J.

Charles Whitehead, of South River, N. J., turned in the most decisive victory of the day. Out in 35 and 5 up at the turn, he beat S. R. Greene, of Durham, N. C., 8 and 6.

Richard D. Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., a former metropolitan champion, was hard pressed for a 2 up victory over John S. Kerr, of Cleveland, Ohio, a University of North Carolina student, on the home green.

F. J. Allan, of Pittston, Pa., turned in a surprise victory over W. B. McCullough, jr., of Philadelphia, 2 up.

George Abrams Signs for Jones Rematch; Goldie Ahearn Denies Coercive Methods

Pilot of Local Boxer Accepts 12½%, But He Kicks.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bristling like a peeved poodle and threatening to don the padded mittens again in defense of his honor, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday hotly denied that pressure was brought to bear on George Abrams in getting his signature on the line for a return match with Jimmy Jones, of Baltimore.

The argument arose over financial terms of the match. Jones, as victor in their first meeting, naturally was offered the lion's share—25 per cent. Abrams was given his choice of 12½ per cent or no fight, Syd Fishel, his manager, says. Fischel accepted only after prolonged bickering and raucous cries of "hold-up."

Fishel contends he was forced to accept the match because his boy is not known well enough in other cities to get enough work to make his ring career worthwhile. Washington, he claimed, is the only town in which Abrams can earn decent purses at this time, because he lives here and draws a host of friends to the Arena.

While not condemning Jones for getting all he can out of the fight, Fishel, nevertheless, claims that only Abrams' presence in the ring will make it the sell-out the matchmaker anticipates. And for this reason he feels he is entitled to more than 12½ per cent. He demanded 15 per cent, but when Ahearn told him 12½ "or else," he had no choice but to capitulate to his demands.

Ahearn's version of the incident is this, briefly: That Abrams isn't worth a plugged German mark at the boxoffice if he desn't square matters with Jones, and that he is doing George a big favor in giving him another shot at the Baltimore belter. Jones, he points out, may be unreasonable in his demands, but holds the whiphand for the time being, and if Abrams wants to fight him it's up to the local boy to meet his terms.

Anticipating another tough match and determined to be in the best physican condition of his young career, Abrams, meanwhile, has moved to a small farm on the outskirts of Alexandria, and is working diligently for the bout. He was unable to sleep three nights before his first encounter with Jones, he reports, because of noises in the apartment house in which he resides here. Radio fans and parties and one thing or another kept him awake.

He boxed three rounds with Howard Scott yesterday, sharpening his defense for a right hook, such as Jones felled him wrth, and this time is confident that right will not find a vulnerable spot in his armament. Moreover, George is trying to add power to his own punch and wil redouble his efforts for a knockout victory.

Black Hawks Spring Upset

Chicagoans Beat Leafs in Opener, 3-1.

By the United Press.

Toronto, April 5.—The underdog Chicago Black Hawks, with a minor league substitute replacing injured Goalie Mike Karakas, scored a 3-to-1 upset oyer the Toronto Maple Leafs in the opening game of the Stanley Cup hockey final tonight.

Alfie Moore, goalie of the Pittsburgh Hornets, International-American League Club, played a brilliant game in the Chicago nets to check Toronto's high scoring machine.

The National Hockey League champions opened the game with a burst of speed that produced a goal by Drillon in the first two minutes, and it looked like the Hawks were in for a drubbing. Chicago didn't score until the 16-minute mark, when Johnny Gottselig, taking a relay from Dahlstrom and Romnes, beat Broda on a perfect shot to the upper corner.

The second session saw both playing wide open, and at 1:45 the Hawks went ahead when Paul Thompson took a breakaway pass from Earl Siebert and whizzed it past Broda into the cords.

Toronto's five-man assault in the third backfired when Gottselig stole the puck, skated the entire length of the ice and beat Broda on a high twister.

Second of the best of five series for the cup will be played here Thursday night.

Harris Picks Club to Face 'Southpaws'

Stone Is Only Outfielder Chosen on Both Teams; Bluege Gets Job.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., April 5.—S-h-h-h! The Nats are in the throes of deep, dark strategy (to say nothing of their slump) here in Orlando. On the theory that his ball club can do little (they have lost eight straight to big league teams), Manager Bucky Harris has begun to manipulate and deploy his forces in new formations.

Harris has compounded a Washington batting order for special use against left-handed pitchers, and another that is calculated to hit best against right-handers. Next time you see the Nats, take a good look at the type of pitching they're facing, because that will govern the make-up of the team Harris sends on the field.

If it's right-handed pitching the Nats are meeting, then their line-up will read like this:

Buddy Myer, 2b. Cecil Travis, ss.
Buddy Lewis, 3b. Mel Almada, cf.
Johnny Stone, rf. Rick Ferrell, c.
Zeke Bonura, 1b. ..... p.
Goose Goslin, lf.

Ossie Bluege, 2b. Johnny Stone, rf.
Buddy Lewis, 3b. George Case, cf.
Cecil Travis, ss. Rick Ferrell, c.
Zeke Bonura, 1b. ..... p.
Al Simmons, lf.

Thus, you'll notice, Johnny Stone is the only fixture in the Washington outfield. Harris has on call six outfielders and he means to use all of them in a reversible system, according to the pitching.

But the most exciting item in Harris' new batting order against left-handed pitching is the presence of Ossie Bluege, the oldest infielder in the league, at second base in Buddy Myer's accustomed spot.

Bluege for Southpaws.

Bluege, at 37, is deemed every bit as capable a second baseman as Myer, and because he is a right-handed hitter will get the call against southpaws, Harris announced.

The Nats' manager was committed to the Bluege-Myer change by Bluege's sensational hitting against three Cardinal southpaws yesterday when the 37-year-old rapped out four smashing hits.

"It would be asking too much for Bluege to play every day," said Harris, "but three or four days a week he can give us a great game out there. And he can hit southpaw pitching.

"There's no use kidding ourselves," said Harris, "every club was set to murder us with left-handed pitching with our old line-up. Now I think we'll have the edge with our alternative batting order. With Goslin and Case in there against left-handers instead of Simmons and Almada, we may be sacrificing in a defensive way in our outfield—but not much—and the percentages are with us."

Thus Bluege has nearly completed the circuit of the Washington infield. For more than 10 years he was the Nats' regular third baseman, then shifted to shortstop and proved a star in that position. Concerning Bluege's second base play, Harris has no qualms whatsoever.

Harris Likes Bluege.

The assignment of young George Case to the centerfield post which Almada will vacate against left-handed pitching is a tribute to the rookie's development as a defensive outfielder during the present training season. Under Clyde Milan's coaching he has learned how to break for a ball and how to catch it.

The Nats' new system will get its first workout tomorrow against the Boston Bees, who arrive at Tinker Field to close out the exhibition game season here with two battles. Ken Chase and Ray Phebus, the lone remaining hopes of Harris that his rookie pitching crop will provide the staff with a regular, will take the mound against the Bees.

Camp will be broken here on Thursday following the second game with the Bees. The Nats will entrain for Alanta, where they play their first game of the homeward trek.

Today was an off-day on the exhibition schedule but Harris herded his squad to Tinker Field for a two-hour batting drill. Goslin, Bonura, Simmons and Case were the slugging stars of the day.

Jimmy Wasdell, who has resigned himself to the loss of the first base job with the Nats, is in earnest about turning outfielder and every day finds him chasing flies before the game.

'I'll Never Play on Ryder Team!' Vows Sarazen, Angry at Jacobus

Fiery Italian Star Rages Over Not Having Ever Been Made Captain of the Team.

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Augusta, Ga., April 5.—Gene Sarazen tonight fired a bombshell into the ranks of the Professional Golfers Association, striking particularly at President George Jacobs by vowing he never again would compete on the American Ryder Cup team because he never had been honored with the team captaincy.

The Connecticut squire is a very stormy man who is given to strong opinions and blasts, but as he called it quits in international pro team-play competition against Great Britain he talked like a kid who had lost his best pal. Years of smoldering rage over his failure to achieve his great ambition had faded into a hurt look I never before saw on his face.

"I'll never play on another Ryder Cup team," he said simply.

"The failure of Jacobus to name me captain of the team is an insult and a wound that will never heal. I think every one will agree my record stacks up favorably enough with that of any other pro, past or present, to have given me one shot at that captaincy. I won every worthwhile championship and I guess I did my share on every Ryder Cup team we ever had. But no, Jacobus didn't see fit to let me achieve my last and profoundest ambition.

"And so, he can have his Ryder Cup team, I wouldn't play on another; I wouldn't accept the captaincy now if it was handed to me on a silver platter.

"What happened last year? P. G. A. politics, that's it. With Walter Hagen out of competition, I thought surely I would be named captain at last. But Jacobus named his bosom pal, Ed Dudley, playing captain, and appointed Hagen nonplaying captain to give me an insult that made me boil inside. I was ready to explode and quit last year when that happened, but I decided to turn it over in my mind. It's been almost a year since then, and I feel the cut more strongly than ever."

As if he read my thoughts, Sarazen continued, after gazing sorrowfully out of his hotel window for almost a full, silent minute.

"Perhaps I have passed my zenith, but I guess my 1937 record still was as good as anybody's. Certainly it was better than Dud-

Ring Judge Keeps Post

Mulhall Denies Quitting; Was Not Criticized.

A report that Bob Mulhall has resigned as a boxing judge because of alleged criticism of a decision he handed down last Monday night, was denied emphatically last night by Heinie Miller, secretary of the Boxing Commission. Miller is the one accused of criticizing Mulhall's work.

Following closely on the heels of Denny Hughes' resignation as a referee because of Commissioner Paul Haworth's comment on his work, Mulhall's supposed resignation caused a mild stir among ring fans.

Miller not only denied criticizing the veteran judge's work but pointed out that he has no authority to do so. Mulhall did confer with Miller concerning his resignation, however, meeting him at the commission offices early yesterday.

"Bob came to the office and asked me if I thought he should resign," Miller said, "because he disagreed with the other judge and referee so many times. He said he thought he might be wrong in his decisions since he was at variance with the others so frequently.

"I told him, however, that the fact that he disagreed with the others did not count against him or mean that his judgment was faulty. I believe it merely focuses attention on the need for two judges and a referee at every bout. He might see things the others missed. That happens very often. And how many men see eye to eye on fights?

"As for me criticizing his work last Monday, why that's preposterous! It's not my duty to criticize the officials' work and I'd be laying myself open to criticism if I did. As a matter of fact I didn't pay strict enough attention to the fights to really compare notes on the decisions handed down."

Wilson Boys Club Beats Anacostia

Woodrow Wilson Boys Club got the jump on Anacostia last night in the first games of the Community Center's Boys Clubs Tournaments. The Southeast boys took only one decision in the three games played in the Wilson and Anacostia gymnasiums, that being in the 115-pound class, where Gus Placos spelled the difference between victory and defeat with 19 points, more than half of his team's total.

The score was 30 to 14. In the 100-pound class, Wilson won, 15 to 10, and repeated the dose in the unlimited class, 32 to 20. J. O'Connor and D. Feldman shared honors for the winners with 11 points each.

The tournament will be resumed tomorrow, with Langley and Roosevelt teams meeting at both of the schools.

Baugh Sent To Columbus

Paul Dean Is 'Farmed' to Houston.

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 5 (AP).—Football Star Sammy Baugh and Paul Dean, erstwhile pitching ace, have been released to minor league clubs, the St. Louis Cardinals' management disclosed today.

Baugh, an infielder, goes to Columbus in the American Association, while Dean has been optioned to Houston, another Cardinal farm, in the Texas League.

Baugh showed much promise with the Cardinals this spring and at one time appeared to have a fine chance for the third base job. Frankie Frisch, Cardinal manager, has requested that Baugh be used at shortstop by Columbus.

Paul Dean, younger brother of Dizzy, went on the voluntary retired list last season but was reinstated this spring by Judge K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner. His ailing arm failed to respond to treatment and in his only pitching start in training games he was shelled for nine runs in one inning by the Boston Bees.

Court Heads Vote 'Brakes'

Two Rule Changes Due to Retard Game.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 5. — Basketball, which roared into high speed this past season with its center jump relegated to the junk pile, may get the "brakes" next winter.

Coaches of the national association, making recommendations to the association's national rules committee, voted "general approval" today to the center jump elimination. At the same time, however, they advocated two rule changes which would slightly slow down the game and give players longer and more rest periods.

By a vote of 71 to 1, coaches recommended that the rules body, which will meet here tomorrow, increase from one to two minutes the length of time out periods, on a 55-to-7 ballot, the court mentors recommended that five time out periods instead of four be permitted.

The action was viewed by some coaches as an answer to criticism that elimination of the center jump resulted in too fast a pace during the 1937-1938 season. The no-center jump rule, except at the start of the game and at the half, was not discussed and coaches voted to continue with the regulation at least another season.

On motion of Nat Holman, of the City of New York, the mentors recommended a change in the "3 second" rule which is expected, if authorized by the rules body, to aid the offense.

Five teams retained their undefeated status in the Metropolitan Scholastic Golf League matches yesterday as the entire league membership of 12 teams competed on six different courses.

Western, Georgetown Prep, Bethesda and Roosevelt won and tied for the lead with two victories and no defeats while Gonzaga routed Devitt in its debut and was only a match behind.

Two shutouts were recorded, the Gonzagans blanking Devitt, 6 to 0, at Indian Spring while Roosevelt swamped Anacostia by a 9-to-0 margin at Army and Navy.

Georgetown Prep nosed out Central by a 5-to-4 margin in the closest match of the day over the Garrett Park course while other pace setters won handily; Wilson over Blair, 6 to 3, at Kenwood; Western over Tech by the same margin at Washington, and Bethesda, 4 to 2, over Devitt at Congressional.

The Little Hoyas-Central encounter was the feature, with six of the nine matches going to the seventeenth hole and two not decided until the final green. One was the deciding point, the best ball of the third foursome, where Messech and Higgins, of the winners, won 1 up over Klen and Cole, of the Centralites.

Ralph Bogart, Wilson ace, won every hole against Saunders, of the Blair team, while Phil Buscher, of the Silver Spring club, upset Earl Skinker, Columbia Club junior ace, on the nineteenth hole. The Presidents scored all the points in the third foursome, however, for the victory.

ley's and Hagen's, and much better as a working golfer's than Jacobus' mark. I am glad I don't miss as many 2-foot putts on a round as he does chances to do something for the pros."

Sarazen's blast adds another rupture in the P. G. A. ranks, though Jacobus is a pretty good jockey when it comes to rough riding. The last rebellion came when he tossed out Tournament Bureau Manager Bob Harlow.

The rift is the second in the past month that has occurred between Jacobus and a member of the P. G. A. Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., driving range professional and Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, was recently suspended from the body for 30 days after a "run-in" with the P. G. A. mentor at his home course, the Bobby Jones Club, Sarasota, Fla.

As Sarazen finished his say-so, I asked him what his greatest thrill was in Ryder Cup competition. His face broke into a smile and he told about his match against Percy Alliss in the singles of the 1937 matches.

"I've had all kinds of thrills, but that was tops. I started out by winning the first five holes, but finished 1 down at lunch. Percy was hotter than hot that day. With 11 holes to go, he had me 3 down. I'll never forget Hagen. He walked with us and kept betting galleryites I'd win. I finally got going, scoring three straight birdies, but still I was 3 down and now only 8 to go. But I finally overtook him and had him 1 down and 2 to go. On the thirty-fifth green I laid Percy a dead stymie from 30 feet, but he sank his putt and forced the match to the last green. How he sank that putt Hagen and I will never know.

"Anyway, I won the match and clinched the Ryder Cup, but I don't care to look at it again as long as Jacobus is head of the P. G. A."

Bob Tow Sought For Return Fight With Henry Lewis

Harry Raskin, Bob Tow's trainer, is back in the hamlet and enthusiastically pounding the tomtom for his charge.

"Bob made a big hit even though he lost," he said. "And promoters from Pittsburgh and Baltimore tried to arrange a return bout immediately after the bout. We'll take it if John Henry Lewis is willing, but I don't think he wants any more of Tow.

"If there was any dissatisfaction with the fight it was because the light-heavyweight champion was a heavy favorite to knock Tow out, and couldn't. A lot of money changed hands on that . . . Bob gave him a good fight, and is ready to meet him again, any time, any place."

Tech High's Nine Wins, 12 to 1, Over Montgomery Blair

Tech High School opened its baseball season yesterday and pointed with pride to the fact that this year's nine will carry plenty of stick ability as they easily defeated Montgomery Blair, 12-1, on the latter's diamond.

The first inning saw the Tech batters shove across six runs, more than enough to win the ball game. But just to make the game a little more sure, Louis Mostow, crack Tech leftfielder, slammed out a home run. The only run scored by the home team came in the fifth inning, but it made little difference.

Doc Murphy May Be Matched With Casey Or Nagurski if He Defeats Martinelli Here

Dropkick Artist Will Meet Italian Star Tomorrow.

You can take Joe Turner's word for it that Dr. John Murphy, the blond Irishman, is rapidly becoming one of the mat game's biggest boxoffice attractions and is in line for a shot at "Crusher" Casey's and Bronko Nagurski's respective world titles.

"This Murphy," Turner was saying yesterday, "looked like a first class palooka the first time I saw him wrestle, and I gave him about two months. Y'know a man can get awfully discouraged getting thrown around a couple of times a week, and I thought he'd get his fill and quit.

"Well, he didn't look like much to me that first time, but the fans liked him and I brought him back. I try to please the fans, y'know. Well sir, the second time I saw him he was improved at least 50 per cent—he was really amazing, and he had that dropkick. Still, he could be a flash in the pan—go good for a while, then fade out of the picture.

"But this young fellow evidently likes to wrestle, and he's smart, along with it. Instead of just sitting around waiting for bouts, he started working in the gymnasium, almost religiously. He used to rely on that dropkick, but not any more. He learned a new hold from everybody he wrestled, and he worked on 'em in the gymnasium until he got 'em down pat.

"Now he's a first class wrestler, knows all the standard holds and a few trick ones he invented himself. I tell you, it wouldn't surprise me if they didn't have to match him with Casey or Nagurski pretty soon, the way he's pinning these other men. There won't be anybody left to wrestle soon.

"Of course, Martinelli may give him trouble Thursday night, and if he gets by him there's still James—a real wrestler. That would be a match. James is no slouch, y'know. A little light, but powerful and cagey. Yes sir, that would be a match. I may make it if they win Thursday night."

Now Then Outclasses Field to Win Shoreham Handicap at Bowie

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, April 6.—Al Singer, former lightweight champion—the guy who pounded out nearly half a million dollars with his fists—is trying a comeback because he is dead broke and the world is crumbling about his ears.

In 1930 Champion Singer told reporters: "You can bet all the tea in China that I'll never go broke. I have my money invested wisely."

Digging through the files of 1930, we find a publicity handout given off by Madison Square Garden. It said: "Singer has invested his ring earnings in gilt-edged securities, gold bonds and first mortgages which will bring $15 a week for the rest of his life."

That's the picture of Singer in 1930, a Jewish champion straight from New York's Ghetto, a fellow who came up the hard way and who was protecting himself financially against the future.

But all this protection; all these investments apparently meant nothing. Al Singer is broke today. And you'll find the dark-haired, middle-sized chap in the white sweat shirt and black trunks pounding the bag, skipping rope and shadow boxing every afternoon at Stillman's Gymnasium. He is readying himself to fight again—at the age of 30, according to the record books. Manager Hymie Caplin says, "Naw, he ain't that old. He's only 28. We had to give the commission the wrong age when he started. He was so young!"

• • • •

Caplin nursed Singer up from the amateurs to the championship. And while Singer was champion—affluent—on top of the world—he and Hymie split up. Singer never did much after that rift with Hymie. His tenure as champion was briefest in 135-pound history. He won the title by knocking out Sammy Mandell in the first round on July 17, 1930. And he lost the crown when knocked out by Tony Canzoneri in the first round on November 14, 1930. He was champion for four short months. During that period his prestige suffered also by being knocked out in the third round by Jimmy McLarnin. That was an over-the-weight affair.

Singer and his former manager, Caplin, hadn't spoken for more than seven years when a mutual friend brought them together last week. They shook hands and agreed to forget the past. Hymie was to manage Al again—try to bring him back to the big time—back to the potatoes.

Caplin explained to friends, "It's a shame the way everyone has deserted Al, now that he's broke. All his fair-weather friends are gone."

• • • •

After a couple more days at Stillman's Gym, Caplin will send Singer into the mountains to rough it for two weeks. Then Al will return to Stillman's and start boxing again. He will have some tune-up fights. Then Hymie will try to launch Al on the big time again.

"The lightweight division isn't much now," Hymie said. "It ought to be easy pickings for Al, if he can fight at all. He ought to knock out plenty of dough and get back on his feet. He's still got the speed and the kick."

Hymie emphasized that Al weighs only about 142 pounds now, and that a few weeks of conditioning will melt him down well below the 135-pound limit. "He's still a natural lightweight," says Hymie. "And a clean living fellow."

• • • •

What happened to Singer's money?

"Nothing—except that everything Al touched turned to red during the depression and what people called the 'Recession' afterward," Hymie explained. "He went broke, just like a lot of other folks who figured their investments were gilt-edged. He tried the night club business too—and lost a lot in that."

"Sure he'll come back," declared Hymie. "He's a hungry fighter now. He's fighting for potatoes—fighting to show up the fair-weather friends who deserted him—fighting to prove himself a man in the eyes of his wife and little boy. If I'm wrong, it's the first big mistake I ever made in judging a fighter and a man!"

Mt. Rainier Nine Ready for Season

Mount Rainier High School's baseball squad, which up until a few days ago had 39 candidates trying for positions, felt the weight of Coach Francis Furgang's pruning knife as he reduced the team to 16 players in preparation for the opening game April 12 with the National Training School.

With only four lettermen returning to carry on the stick work for the Black and Gold team, the Mounts' outlook for a good season is not bright. Kenneth Taylor and George Green, pitchers; James Miller, third baseman, and Frank Landolt, second basemen, will be the lads around which the team will be built.

Beats Bob C. And Warlaine To Pay $2.70

Sonny Workman Pilots Winner to a Three-Length Victory.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie Race Track, April 5.—Now Then, a colt which spent the whole of last winter winning one race in Florida, made it two straight on the Bowie oval this afternoon by outclassing four other 3-year-olds in the Shoreham Hotel Handicap, a $1,200 added race which served as feature for a crowd of 8,000.

Owned by F. J. Buchanon, of Washington, and ridden by Jockey Sonny Workman, also of Washington, Now Then carried the equivalent of the Washington Monument in the 124 assorted pounds placed on his back. However, he bounded to the front and made every post a winning one.

Three lengths behind, at the end of the 6-furlong sprint, came Bob C., to be second ahead of Warlaine, the latter being a Kentucky Derby hope of Mrs. Western W. Adams. Detroit Bull and Tedmelia completed the vest pocket field.

The fact that Now Then had a royal chance of winning the race was not a secret. He was played and replayed and in the final analysis a $2.70 mutuel was displayed. By coincidence, he also paid $2.70 to place. His time for the distance was a mediocre 1:14 2-5.

The daily double provided $72.50 worth of excitement for those who were lucky enough to have teamed Good Odds, winner of the first race, with Remarkable, winner of the second.

Baby Way annexed the seventh, defeating Suncrax and Vitamin B. Baby Way paid a $6.30 mutuel.

Those who played the hunch took down a bunch as the program opened. Good Odds, second in three of six races in New Orleans last winter, overcame the "always a bridesmaid" jinx to defeat Double Talk and Royal Bit among others. Ridden by Apprentice Jockey Danny Driscoll, Good Odds came from off the pace to win going away. The entry of Double Talk and Dust To Dust was the favorite, but neither had anything that the New Orleans filly couldn't match. Those who backed her chances collected a $22.10 mutuel.

One of those "paddock tips" made good in the second race. Remarkable, whispered as a good thing, won by the head margin over No Ending at the finish, was sufficient for a $6.70 pay-off. Little Tramp, who looked the part as he trailed the field to the stretch, closed with a belated rush on the outside to garner third money.

Sonny Workman, Washington jockey, won the thrilling third race with the favorite Chief Cherokee. The $4.50 shot was not hurried during the early running. Workman seemingly content to let Aglow and Roguish Girl run themselves out. Aglow stopped badly while Roguish Girl weakened herself enough to fall prey to Chief Cherokee's closing dash. The winner was credited with a head the best of it at the wire.

Red Jacket, owned by Mrs. John Durant and trained by Mrs. John Bosley, made his turf debut in the fourth race and gave only a flash of the speed his handlers hope will land him a place at the barrier in the Kentucky Derby. He pressed the pace of Suburbanite for part of the journey and then stopped. Suburbanite went on to win for the favorite players at a $5 mutuel, with The Spiller second and Mexico City third.

Fairless New President of U. S. Steel Corp.

E. M. Voorhees Named Finance Chairman, P. R. Clarke Elected Director.

By the Associated Press

New York, April 5.—Benjamin F. Fairless today became chief administrative officer of the United States Steel Corporation upon his re-election as president by the board of directors. Edward R. Stettinius, jr., previously chairman of the finance committee, was elected chairman of the board, as announced yesterday, replacing Myron C. Taylor.

Enders M. Voorhees, who has been vice chairman of the finance committee, was elected chairman of that committee. Phillip R. Clarke, president of City National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, was elected a director to succeed the late E. J. Buffington.

Fairless is also president of the U. S. Steel Corporation of Delaware, the management corporation, with which the principal manufacturing subsidiaries have management contracts. He will divide his time between New York and Pittsburgh, where the management company maintains city offices.

New President Is 47.

The naming of 47-year-old, one-time country schoolmaster Fairless as "chief administrative officer" was seen in steel circles as increasing the importance and prestige of the presidency of the corporation, to which office Fairless was chosen the first of this year.

This action of the directors at their organization meeting followed the annual meeting of the shareholders in Hoboken yesterday, at which Taylor made his valedictory as the big corporation's top official.

Since the retirement of James A. Farrell as president in 1932, the presidency of the corporation has not carried the title of chief administrative officer, chairman Taylor assuming those duties. In his new position, Fairless, it is understood will share with 37-year-old Stettinius, new chairman, a larger portion of the work of directing the affairs of the huge corporation.

Utilities 98% Filed With SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday that public utility holding companies having book assets of approximately $13,500,000,000 had become registered under the holding company act. These assets represent about 98 per cent of the total of approximately $13,800,000,000 which are estimated to be subject to the act.

Standard Gas & Electric Co., of Chicago, Ill., with book assets of $1,158,000,000 as of December 31, 1936, has filed its notification of registration together with two subsidiary holding companies, Northern States Power Co. of Delaware and Louisville Gas & Electric Co.

Electric Bond & Share Co., of New York, also has filed notification of registration. The book assets of its system were $2,625,000,000 as of December 31, 1936, excluding American & Foreign Power Co., Inc., which has made application for exemption.

Wheat Lower Despite Jump At Winnipeg

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 5.—Notwithstanding 4 cents a bushel sudden upshoot of Winnipeg May quotations, Chicago wheat futures averaged lower today and touched three-year new bottom price records.

A majority of traders here apparently acted on belief that April unofficial crop estimates had been fairly well discounted beforehand. The estimates, which were completed today, showed an average forecast of 717,000,000 bushels 1938 probable domestic winter crop, the third largest ever known.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ¾ lower compared with yesterday's finish, May 81¾@81⅞, July 79¼@79⅜, corn ¼ off to ¼ up, May 59⅜, July 61@61⅛, oats unchanged to ¼ down, rye at 1 cent decline to ¾ advance and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to 10 cents gain.

The Market

By A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Slowly Higher in Quiet Trading; Bonds Firm; Wheat Lower.

New York, April 5.—Stocks crept slowly upward today on a small volume of trading while most other markets were yielding a bit to quiet pressure. Wheat dipped a half cent to 81⅞ cents a bushel and cotton was lower. Bonds improved. The dollar moved again at franc exchange.

The behavior of this stock market, which was as dull as it has been in many a day, reflected the general feeling of uncertainty about several importantt matters that must come to a head before any one feels free to extend himself in securities. The severe shakeout of last week made it possible for traders to sit on the sidelines today and await developments.

Over in France the Chamber of Deputies was taking a firm stand against Premier Blum's demand for dictatorial powers. If anything, this is a bull point on the political situation in its broader aspects, coming closely as it does on the revolt of the lower house here against arming President Roosevelt with more power.

Foreign Influence.

In the foreign field also there was a growing likelihood that the Spanish situation may soon become a positive bullish influence. The most recent success of Gen. Franco's forces found reflection today in a demand for stock of International Telephone, the company which is calcuated to profit more than any other by a return of normalcy in Spain. While damage has unquestionably been done to the physical properties of the Spanish telephone subsidiary, the real loss has been in the interruption of earning power for nearly two years.

This market also was waiting to see what the Administration intends to do in the railroad situation. Mr. Jones, of the RFC, was quoted as sayjng after a conference with the President today that the railroads do not need money as much as they do an increase in freight traffic. That is obvious to anyone, but it is equally apparent that if the traffic is not forthcoming without much delay several more systems are likely to topple into receivership. Mr. Jones predicts that the roads will soon get their increas in tonnage, which is just another way of forecasting a general pickup in business. The market hopes he is right, but the market proved last week that it is unwilling to discount hopes alone.

Stocks Higher.

Stocks were fractionally higher at the opening with the exception of a few, like United States Steel and Bethlehem, but it was soon apparent that not much would be done on either side of the market. The surprising thing was that the price level improved as much as it did on so little trading, for there were times when the better part of a minute elapsed between the recording of transactions on the ticker. Steel common and all the other laggards picked up in the later trading and approached the close with substantial net gains. American Telephone was a feature, advancing several points on what was apparently short covering. Some traders were bidding for stock for cash in the afternoon.

Feather Bed Jobs.

The Administration is reported as opposed to any kind of a subsidy for the railroads, so if there is to be temporary relief to save more mileage from receivership it must take the form of a reduction in the cost of operations. Debt charges would not be such a burden if costs had not been padded so much in recent years, and it is not alone the matter of pay for work done. Work schedules have become so complicated that railway operating forces are compensated for a great deal of work they do not perform. The ICC report for 1936, for instance, shows that the roads paid for 125,000,000 hours work not actually done. For this they paid over $100,000,000, which is a lot of money even in the language of a Congressman. That figure is over 7 per cent of the whole labor bill for operating forces. The benefits of labor saving devices accrue to the workers. If that theory is to prevail it is difficult to see how any real saving is to result for consolidations.

Equipment Bidding.

Insurance companies compete with bankers at public sales of securities just often enough to impair the fiction that they are shrewd judges of investment values. Today one of them, bidding on an issue of equipment certificates, paid nearly two points more than the nearest banking bid. Bankers do not average a two-point profit on resale of securities bought in competitive sale, whether equipment trusts or municipal bonds. The two types of bidders are not on common ground when they enter a sale. If the banker is too far off in his appraisal he must take the chance of an actual loss on resale, especially if something should happen to shake the market right after the issue is bought. The institutional investor buys to hold permanently. The same is true of private purchases of new issues by institutions.

Telephone Gains.

Gains or losses in telephone installations always lag well behind general business and the present is no exception. In March the Bell System actually added 36,600 instruments, which would have been gratifying even if industry were not on the downturn, for it is recalled that the system started the year with as many stations connected as there were at the high point in 1930. The New York company normally accounts for nearly 20 per cent of the system's installations, but in March it gained only about 7 per cent of what the system gained. Telephones are staying on the lines, but the toll calls that go over them are another matter.

N. B. C. Revealed as Substantial Contributor to 1937 Profits.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 5.—David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, told stockholders in their annual meeting today the corporation was still operating at a profit in all its divisions.

The steep decline in business in recent months, he acknowledged, had cut into Radio's profit figures. "Nevertheless," he added, "it is estimated that our net profits for this quarter will be more than adequate to cover preferred dividend requirements, leaving a small balance applicable to the common stock."

Sarnoff revealed the profit-making power of the National Broadc

Bob Burns Says—

The other night one of the greatest physical culture experts in the world gave a lecture here on the care of the human body and nobody came because they didn't want to take their automobiles out in the rain. I suppose we're all purty much alike. We wouldn't think of puttin' anything into our cars that might be bad for them but we think nothing of giving our bodies a beatin'.

I know one actor that got his stomach in such terrible shape they didn't think he'd live, but they finally got a diet specialist who, after workin' for months, was finally able to give the actor some encouragement. The doctor says "If you'll stick with this diet you'll be as good as new." The actor says "I know, but how long will it be before I can eat things that don't agree with me?"

Who Murdered Grogan?

Dan Grogan was a killer. Toughy Bergen's mob was after him to revenge their leader's death. Grogan was found with three bullets in his back. Prof. Fordney was able to put the finger on the murderer through one shell. If you were given the same clews as Prof. Fordney had—could you solve the murder of Dan Grogan?
